Britain Has Stopped Building Work on Four Warships

REPORTERS PUT DELEGATES UPON TORTURE RACK

Borden Is Third to Answer Tricky Questions on Disarmament

HISTORY IS REVIEWED

Example of Canada and the U.S. Held up for Others to Follow

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Canadian Press, staff correspondent).—Sir Robert Borden, Canda's delegate to the conference on the limitation of armaments, took his turn upon the newspapermen's rack this evening.

In accordance with the plan of the British delegation to have one of the empire representatives grant an interview to the correspondents each evening Sir Robert met over a hundred of the reporters in the British headquarters at the navy building at six o'clock. He was third on the list of British targets for journalistic queries. Mr. Balfour and Lord Lee having been interviewed on the previous evenings.

The meeting is somewhat of an ordeal for the delegate, for the majority of the newspapermen spend most of the time taken up in their long journeying between the different headquarters in thinking up trick questions to hurl at his head wi h ithe object of luring him into divulging some information they are not legitimately entitled to.

Sir Robert, however, is familiar wit hthe wiles of the reporter and he came through the test with flying colors. A dozen or more indiscreet questions were tactfully and courteously turned aside and several which were within the bounds of what it was legitimate to disclose were answered. Then someone mentioned the "mush-bagot agreement" and the correspondents found themselves listening ith interest to a little talk on the relationship between Canada and the United States. After outlining clearly and concisely the negotiations of 1817 which led to the agreement respecting the exclusion of war vessels from the Great Lakes. Sir Robert explained how the original pact has been extended to dispense with armament along the whole international boundary. The example which Canada and the United States had shown the world in holding steadfastly to this agreement for over a century and living side by side in a complete spirit of friendliness and accord, he suggested, might well be considered by the nations assembled here for the present conference.

Another remarkable example of international co-operation which was of particular interest at the present time, Sir Robert continued, was the creation of the International Joint commission in 1909. Sir Robert gave the correspondents a very clear outline of the operation of this international court for the settlement of international disputes, pointing out the ways in which it had been of inestimable benefit to both countries.

Incidentally, Canada's conference representative proved himself a sort of walking Canadian encyclopedia. In response to requests he gave a fund of information regarding the Dominion. Some of the questions posed by the United States reporters indicated a need for the diffusion of information concerning Canada, in this section of the globe. One wanted to know whether Canada proposed to scrap her "fortifications" on the Pacific. Another asked whether Sir Robert did not believe that the consummation of reciprocity between Canada and the United States would serve to bring the two nations still closre together.

"As I am not a member of the Canadian government", Sir Robert replied, amid a general laugh, "I must ask you to excuse me from discussing questions of fiscal policy."

Sir Robert's remarks on the Canadian-United States agreement were published extensively by the United States papers.

Changes From Ratio of Strength Set Forth in Hughes' Stated Plan Will be Resisted Most Stubbornly

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Japan's request for an increase in the proportional strength of her navy may lead speedily to some plain talk across the council table of the armaments conference.

The United States delegation stands ready to dispute stubbornly any material changes from the ratio set forth in the Hughes plan. That ratio, it was emphasized by highest authorities today, reflects existing proportional strength and so cannot be altered without upsetting a fundamental principle of the whole plan.

In effect, the United States figures would give Japan six fighting ships to every ten owned by the United States and every ten owned by Great Britain. The Japanese have hinted but never formally announced that they want seven to ten. The naval experts of the United States really believe that five to ten is nearer the proper allotment. Great Britain has accepted the six to ten plan in principle, but her spokesmen have been silent about the new Japanese proposals.

Address of Bluebeard's Victim Given to Court Proved Five Years Old

VERSAILLES, Nov. 18—Henri Landru, on trial for murder in the assizes court here today fulfilled his promise of yesterday to give the address of one of his eleven alleged victims, but th damatic effect was somwhat lessened when he address proved to be five years old. The prisoner told the court that Mm. Heon, whom he is charged with having murdered on Oct. 6, 1915, lived six months following that date at the Estaminet Hotel Du Mans, in Paris. He declared the police had never been there to seek any trace of the missing woman.

Prosecutor Godefroy who yesterday assured the reputed "Bluebeard" of Gambais, that proof that one of his victims was living would save his head, applied to the court today to direct the police to investigate the address Landru gave and repor to the court tomorrow.

Landru said later that if his statement to the court today was verified, he might give other addresses, which, he said, would refute the prosecution's testimony.

Switch Diverted Train and Caused One Death; Injured Will Recover

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 18—One man was killed and three persons were injured today when the Gopher Limited Duluth to the Twin Cities on the Great Northern railway side swiped a string of box cars just outsd the depot yards. The accident was said to be due to the fact that the swich was thrown in the wrong direction and ,it sent the train on the side track instead of the main line track.

Carl Sharpes, switchman was killed. All the injured will recover.

Australian Loan Issue Disappointing to London

LONDON, Nov. 18.—(Canadian Press Cable).—The result of the Western Australian loan issue of $3,000,000 six per cent at 95½ has been disappointing. The underwriters here have been left with sixty-eight percent of the amount, the public having subscribed under one million pounds. This is regarded as somewhat surprising, seeing that the return to investors in this loan is higher than is obtainable from other west Australia stocks, quoted on the market. Little doubt is entertained that the loan will ultimately find a permanent home here.

U.S. Plans to Permit Shipments of Liquor Through the Country

MONTREAL, Nov. 18—That liquor shipments to points outside the United States may now pass through the United Saes en roue to their destination, is the information received here today by the Grand Trunk railway. A few days ago it was announced by United States customs officials that shipments of liquor through United States territory would be prohibited because of constant pilfering.

CANADA'S FIRE LOSSES $287,860 IN ONE WEEK

Skating Will be Popular Pastime In Edmonton This Winter; Many Rinks Are Now Being Prepared

Both City Council and School Board Make Appropriation for Ice to Be Available — Private Rinks Are Numerous — City Issues Regulations Which Must Be Followed indulgence in the pastime. Both city promoting public health, and both have spent a considerable amount of money on the maintenance of rinks. In addition, a large number of citizens have made private rinks for the use of their own and the adjoining families.

This season the skating vogue promises to be stronger than ever, the community leagues are increasing their interest in the matter of securing rinks; the city council and the school board have not got ahead with their arrangements; and there are indications that the number of private rinks will be larger than ever before.

The object of this article is to inform the public of the facilities that are available for skating.

In the first place it must be pointed out that all rinks, no matter where located or whether private or public, or under what conditons they are operated, must conform to the regulations of the city waterworks and engineering department. These regulations are necessary from the points of view of preventing waste of city water and also to prevents nuisances being created when the spring thaw takes place.

Attention to this matter has been drawn by an advertisement issued from the city hall, which emphasizes that all rinks, no matter the size or whether public or private, must be registered at the city waterworks department, and applicants must state their willingness to comply with the city regulations.

These regulations, which have been drawn up by Superintendent Turner, are not very severe, and are as follows:

No free water can be granted to rinks.

The authority of the city commissioners and council must be obtained for rinks where grants are made for this purpose.

All rinks will be subject to inspection, and charges for same calculated according to the actual measurement and volume of water used.

All rinks must be properly prepared with substantial boards or embankment to prevent the waste of water.

Rinks will only be permitted in locations where the drainage can be taken care of in the spring thaw-out.

The waterworks department will not be responsible for any freeze-ups of yard hydrants or house connections or other services used in connection with the making of rinks, or for any council and school have realized the importance of giving assistance in this direction, from the standpoint of

Now that winter has settled down in earnest, a great deal of concern is being shown in the great seasonal pastime—skating and its associated games.

During the last few years, patrons of the sport have increased enormously in the city, both among young and old, and there has been a decided increase in the facilities provided for damage to adjoining property by water used in connection with such skating rinks.

The minimum charge for a public rink where admission is charged is $50.00, which account is payable in advance.

Further, in regard to the above, Superintendent Turner states that in the case of the large rinks, where application to the city is made, they will be flooded by the city engineer's department. In cases where the water is taken from a house meter, the amount taken is charged on the usual bill. When the water is obtained from a yard hydrant, the waterworks department will measure the rink and charge accordingly.

In regard to the skating facilities that are of a public character and are subsidized by either city council or school board, the city provides open-air rinks at the junction of 109th st. and 80th avenue, on the South Side; 95th street and 103 "A" avenue, and 114th street and 103rd avenue.

A caretaker is maintained at these three rinks, which are available to the public schools for hockey games from 4 to 6 o'clock on five nights of the week and on Saturday mornings.

In addition, the city supplies water for rinks which are of a public character at Riverdale school, Bennett school, 113th street and 99th avenue, North Edmonton schol, Norwood, the junction of 121st street and Stoney Plain road and Calder. There will also be such rinks at Westmount and 142nd street.

Mention has already been made of the students having part use of the three larger rinks. Apart from this, arrangements are to be made for the senior high school games to be played on the arena for the North Side; and for the South Side at the South Side covered rink, the games taking place at stipulated hours.

Facilities for Children

For general skating facilities for the school children, the school board provides $1,000, which will pay for children being allowed to skate at 121st rink, the South Side covered rink, and at Boyle street. This skating is also at set hours.

Furthermore, the school board subsidizes any private community rink to the amount of $100, where ice is provided which can be enjoyed by the children.

The estimated amount which the city will spend this year is stated to be in the neighborhood of $2,110.

Application has been made to the waterworks department for private rinks at the Royal Curling club at 121st street, Capital Curling club at 112th street, the Thistle Curling club at the Machinery hall at the exhibition grounds, the Arena Skating rink at the exhibition grounds, the Glenora Skating club at Government house, the University of Alberta, the Bonnie Doon Community league and Alberta College South.

ARMOUR STAFF HAS AGREED TO CUT IN WAGES

Plant Committees Comply with Request Recently Made by Company

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Plant committees of Armour and Company today agreed to accept a general reduction of wages in accordance with the request made by the company ten days ago. The same cuts, it was said, will be accepted in plants of the other packing companies.

This is the first time in the industry that employers and employes have met in plant conferences and agreed on a wage cut. The following reductions, effective November 28, will be made in all plants of Armour and Co., except the one at Fort Worth, Texas: Employes receiving less than 46c an hour cut 7½ cents. Between 46 and 50c inclusive cut 5c. All over 50c cut 3c. A minimum wage of 25c an hour for adult female laor is provided. At Fort Worth the reductions agreed on are: Employes receiving more than 47½, 3 cents cut. Employes receiving between 42½ and 47, 5c. All receiving less that 42½c, 7½c. Piecework rates in all plants are cut 7c. Forty-eight men, twenty-four representing the employes and twenty-four the company, agreed to the reductions after two days' conferences here. The plants are located in Chicago, St. Paul, Sioux City, Omaha, St. Joseph, Kansas City, St. Louis, Denver, Fort Worth.

About 26,000 employes are affected at present, as none of the plants are using a full force. When similar reductions are made in the plants of the other members of the "Big Five"—Morris and Company, Swift and Company, Cudahy and Sons, and Wilson and Company—125,000 men and women, will be affected.

No change is made in the forty-hour week guarantee or working conditions.

DEBATE TEAMS WERE TIED IN TWO CONTESTS

Strathcona High and Red Deer Hold Simultaneous Arguments

While a team representing the Strathcona High School was debating with a visiting team from Red Deer in the inter High School debate on teh subject, "Shall Alberta Own and Control Her Natural Resources?" a team from Strathcona High were conducting a debate on the same subject at Red Deer with a team from the High School there at the same hour Friday afternoon.

The debate which was held at Strathcona High School resulted in a victory for the South Side High School with a score of four points, while that held at Red Deer resulted in a victory of four points for the Red Deer High School, the series ending in a tie.

The Edmonton team took the negative side of the subject at Strathcona and the affirmative at Red Deer.

S. A. G. Barnes presided over the debate held here, and Professor Hardie, of University of Alberta, was the judge. The Edmonton team, composed of Gordon Ruddy and Kenneth McKenzie, and the visiting team from Red Deer, composed of Miss Bennett and Miss Clarke, were congratulated by the judge for the efficient manner in which they presented their arguments.

At the conclusion of the debate the Girls' club of the school entertained the visitin gteam at lunch.

The debate at Red Deer was presided over by Principal Locke, of the High School there, and Professor Wallace acted as judge. The Red Deer team consisted of Lea Searamacke and Howard George, who took the negative side of the subject; the visiting Edmonton team consisting of Ethel McCalla and Ellen Langfeldt, who presented the case for the affirmative.

The King's Message

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The message of King George to President Harding at the opening of the disarmament conference last Saturday was made public today as follows:

"On the occasion of the opening of the international conference at Washington, I again send to you my most sincere wishes for the success of its deliberations. The sympathy and goodwill of the whole British people will be with the conference in its labors for assuring the maintenance of peace."

To this President Harding replied:

"It is difficult to express to you the measure of my appreciation of your message on the occasion of the opening of the conference at Washington. The renewed assurances that your Majesty and the British Empire are in sympathy with the results hoped to be accomplished in the interests of enduring peace, increases my confidence that the labors of the conference will attain this desirable end.'

CHANGES MADE IN ALBERTA'S RAILWAY STAFF

H. G. Dimsdale Takes Charge of Lacombe and Northwestern Line

H. G. Dinsdale, defeated U.F.A. candidate for the constituency of Grouard in the recent provincial election, has been appointed to take charge of the Lacombe and North Western railway, relieving P. L. Debney, who has been with the department since his return from overseas some two years ago.

Mr. Dimsdale, who has also seen service overseas, is an engineer by profession, but of recent years has been engaged in farming. He entered the political lits last July on behalf of his fellow farmers and carried the banner of the U.F.A. against the then government member, J. L. Cote, but was unsuccessful at the polls.

Following the taking of office by the present government and the resignation of H. A. Warner as general manager of Alberta government lines, Mr. Dimsdale, who during his election campaign strongly criticized the administration of the railway department under the Liberal government, was appointed to the position of resident engineer on the extension of the A. and G.W. railway to the new town of aWterways, displacing S. E. Reaugh, fromerly in charge of that work.

On the recent completion of this work, the present position on the Lacombe line was provided for him so that his experience, both as a farmer and engineer, will continue to be available for the service of the government.

greater" naval foce suggested for Japan by Admiral Baron Kato only amounts to the addition of one battle cruiser to the Japanese figures, then the emphatic objections of the United States delegates may not be deemed necessary. But if the suggestion comprehends a real change in proportion, it is declared on authority that a determined diplomatic struggle will result.

The clear delineation of the United States position on this subject served to turn attention again to naval armaments today while the Far Eastern negotiations were at a standstill to permit the Powers to work ou details of his policy. Neither the conference nor any of its committees met during the day, but the nine delegations will assemble tomorrow in executive session to resume their discussions of the Far East.

General support of China's aspirations for national development free from the restrictions that hitherto have surrounded her, was expressed today among the British delegates, who declared that their government was ready to give up the extra territorial privilege as soon as Chinese courts were sufficiently developed to guarantee justice. A similar attitude already had been indicated by France and the United States.

A formal call was issued today for the third public session of the conference, which is to be held Monday. Premier Briand, of France, is expected to speak to the delegates on land armaments in which France is vitally interested, laying down a formula that will become the basis of discussion later.

MEANS SAVING OF FIFTY MILLION ENGLISH POUNDS

One Authority Declares That Double That Amount Is Involved

HOLD DEFENSE SHIPS

Move Disagreeable to Armament Firms But Policy Is Admitted Sound

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The British admiralty's announcement today that it had ordered the cessation of all work on the four warships of the super-Hood type, evoked a chorus of approval by parliament authorities.

Vice-Admiral Ballard, in an aritcle published by the Evening News, estimates it will result in an ultimate saving of £50,000,000. Moreover, he says, it means the abandonment of a design embodying the experiences of the late war in favor of a design to be adopted a decade hence, and that it is conceivable that the decision may lead to the entire disappearance of capital ships. He thinks, however, that if the armor plate mills are idle for a decade it will be difficult to re-start them, especially as regards their personnel.

Admiral Sir Percy Scott, who warmly approves of the Admiralty's announcement, places the saving it will involve at £100,000,000. He thinks no country will scrap its submarines, except possibly the long-range ones, because he says they are primarily weapons of defence.

W. L. Hichens, chairman of the shipbuilding firm of Cammell, Laird and Company, Ltd., thinks that although it is very disagreeable to armament firms, it is unwise to continue spending money while the outlook favors disarmament.

He believes that temporary allowances to the staffs would solve the employment problem.

Enough Battleships Now

Vice-Admiral Mark Kerr is of a similar opinion, adding: "We already have sufficient battleships for Europe, although the ships used overseas are not of much use."

Commander Bellairs, who for a time was lecturer at the Royal Naval College, also thinks the step is perfectly justified, "especially from the viewpoint of the psychological effect of a generous gesture, when it is most important that each nation show good faith."

Up to Japan

"Everything now depends on Japan," he declared. "There is no question about the good intentions of the people of the United States."

Admiral Sir Cyprian Bridge (retired) asserted that the news was the most promising and cheering for a long time, and that it looked like the "final defeat of the Magalomaniacs and the dictatorship of the material age."

Considering the readiness of the United States to abandon her 1916 program, he added, "I think it only decent that we should make some response."

What Closing Means

The mayors of Chatham, Richester and Gillingham will meet tomorrow to discuss the situation arising from the disarmament proposals. The mayor of Chatham said today that the closing of the Chatham dockyard would be a catastrophe for the district and that the Admiralty would be petitioned to provide shipbuilding for the mercantile marine.

BOMBAY RIOTS CAUSED DEATH OF FOUR POLICE

Thirty Others Were Seriously Injured—Situation Now Well in Hand

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Four policemen were killed and thirty seriously injured in Thursday's rioting in Bombay according to an official communication issued by the Inda office today, which adds that the situation was well in hand this morning, in spite of disorders in the centre and north of the city. Although details are lacking, the casualties among the rioters are believed to be as great as those suffered by the police.

The communication says that the rioters were chiefly Mohammedans. Most of the mills were idle today and large crowds were moving about but their attitude was less hostile. Another communication issued by the India office this evening reports that much anxiety in Calcutta over the activities of the non-co-operators who are bringing pressure on the Moslem members of the police by intimidation and molestation to resign. Moslems make up nearly one quarter of the police.

The government of Bengal has announced its intention of proclaiming the Bengal o-co-operative voluteers and other similar bodies, illegal associations.

LAMONT OFFERS AID TO THE DRY AREA OF SOUTH

Dozen Organizations Volunteer to Give All Possible Help to That District

A. M. Ross, rperesenting a dozen organizations of the district of Lamont, has come forward with an offer to assist the farmers of the southern part of the province who are so unfortunate as to be in the drought area. This is the first representation of this kind which has come to Hon. George Hoadley, minister of agriculture, and Mr. Hoadley states that he believes it to show that the people are more than ready, so soon as they are shown how, to assist their brothers of the southern part of the province. The letter from Mr. Ross shows that he speaks for the U. F. A. of Lamont, the U. F. W. A., the village council, the W. C. T. U., the Presbyterian Women's Missionary Society; the Methodist Women's Missionary Society; the Ladies Aid; Masonic Lodge No. 14; Lamont Agricultural Society; the I. O. O. F. of Lamont. For a small centre this would seem to include practically all phases of citizenship.

Mr. Hoadley was very much gratified to get this spontaneous offer to collect as many as possible of the necessaries of life.

In his reply he states that

"On behalf of the government and for those people who are in need in southern Alberta, I wish to express our appreciation of this splendid spirit and kind thought indicated by this action. I am not surprised that this should be done, as it is only what should be expected from Christians and good Canadians when their fellow citizens need their assistance."

Mr. Hoadley believes, if free transportation of clothing, vegetables, meats, fuel and so on, can be provided, that there will be no difficulty in arranging this relief. He states that for the Armenian relief the railroads have undertaken to transport free of charge grains to the elevators, and then on to the ships, the elevators have promised to do the milling free of charge and Mr. Hoadley feels confident that they will do the same for the people of the province who are in need. If people will collect the materials, he thinks that transportation for the necessaries of life will be readily provided.

Manager of New Empire Theatre Has Had Very Lengthy Experience

Maynard Joiner, the recently appointed manager of the New Empire theatre, comes to Edmonton in the wake of a reputation built upon the solid foundation of efficiency.

For the past eight years he was connected with the Grand theatre in Calgary. The first six years were spent as musical director of the house orchestra, during which time he built it up in efficiency until it was second to none amongst Canadian theatre orchestras. Mr. Joiner also conducted the large orchestra which for a few seasons was a feature of musical life in Calgary.

The last two years were spent as manager of the house, and in that field Mr. Joiner met with equal success. Business was never bad at the Grand theatre. Other houses felt depressing times and suffered when attractione wer not up to standard, but Mr. Joiner had a following which never went back on him.

MAYNARD JOINER

Mr. Joiner is an ardent Rotarian and has always been a pillar of the Calgary club. He has also been largely responsible fo rthe success of the Calgary Rotary Minstrel shows, which have been no less artistic than those in Edmonton.

In speaking to The Bulletin, Mr. Joiner said that everything he could do for the comfort and convenience of Edmonton theatre-goers, he would carry out to his best ability. "This is an Edmonton theatre," he said, "and I want the Edmonton people to know and appreciate tha tit is here for their pleasure and I am here to do all I can to help."

The tea given on Wednesday evening by the Eastside Ladies' Aid at the home of Mrs. H. C. McDonald was a very enjoyable affair and success financially. Mrs. McDonald received the guests and was assisted by Mrs. Rankin, Mrs. Harford, Mrs. Stuart and Miss Dodge. The money basket was in charge of Mrs. Bullman. Mrs. McQueen poured coffee and Mrs. Hope tea for the first hour, and were relieved by Mrs. Lee and Mrs. K. McLeod. The tea table was very pretty with its beautiful basket of 'Mums. The musical numbers given by Mrs. Barclay, Mrs. Nurding, Mrs. Holtzman, Miss Parsons, Miss Wells Evelyn May and W. Stuart were much appreciated. A short talk by Dr. McQueen brought to a close a very pleasant evening.

A jolly crowd gathered at the home of Miss Feurt, Dunston Apartments on Tuesday evening in honor of Miss Ruby Malone, an early December bride, when a china and linen shower was given. Many interesting contests were conducted and much good advice given amid a grfeat deal of merriment after which the bride-to-be was completely taken by surprise at the arrival of a big express parcel of substantial good wishes. Community singing and dainty refreshments ended a very enjoyable evening.

Those present were Mesdames Armstrong, Chipman, Coleman, Feurt, McUulty, Parkhill, Parslow, Silver and Turner. Misses Ruby Malone, Alma Berg, Hilda Heslop, Margaret Leblanc, Florence Linden, Ettie Heslop, Mabel Moore, Dorothy McBrien, Ann McNulty, Nellie DeVeau (Fort Saskatchewan), Alberta Nelson, Edna Stewart, Ethel Richardson, Bertha Peterson, Lillian Richardson and Ethel Feurt.

Th monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of the Metropolitan church took a somewhat novel form on Thursday afternoon, when instead of gathering as usual in the church, the members journeyed by car to 118th avenue and from there to the Buchanan Home. This home which is named after Dr. Buchanan, superintendent of missions in Northern Alberta, is the headquarters of Mrs. Errett, who is doing valuable work among the Ruthenians of the city. Here she lives and here is the big schoolroom where she gathers her classes, and sows the seeds that are to make good Canadian citizens of the strangers within our gates. A very pleasant part of the afternoon's program took the form of a shower for the home, every member of the visiting W.M.S. taking a gift of linen or china. These were piled on a table, and presented to Mrs. Errett, the donors and recipient enjoying in equal measure the subsequent opening of fthe parcels.

Mrs. A. G. McKittrick, vice-president, occupied the chair during the meeting which included, in addition to devotional exercises an unusually bright report of the district meeting of the W.M.S., given by Mrs. Hamilton; and also an interesting little talk from the Rev. Mr. Pike, superintendent of Ruthenian work in the city. At the conclusion refreshments were served by the W.M.S. and an informal and delightful little social time resulted, giving the visitors the opportunity of becoming better acquainted with Mrs. Errett.

Over two hundred members' and friends were entertained on Wednesday evening by the men of Arems chapter No. 11, O.E.S who provided a splendid entertainment, with male talent evidenced all the way through, even to the ferreshments, which were equal to everything else offered during the evening. The proceedings opened with a musical program. Mr. MacBeth, chairman of the entertainment committee, presiding. The soloists included Mr. Townend an old favorite, who has been absent for some months owing to ill-health, and who received a warm welcome back again; Mr. Sid Hendra, Mr. R. Ward (humorous), and Mr. J Fleming. Repeated applause showed the appreciation of the audience and made encores necessary; and Mr. Hendra also sang a third time by special request. Mr. Henderson gave a pathetic reading in realistic style, and Mr. A. M. Mitchell contributed humorous selections. Messrs. R. B. MacKenzie and Phelps in costume as Mutt and Jeff were specially good and created no end of amusement. Their tenor and alto duet with its local allusions, sung from a big card bearing a cartoon of Jeff on the outer side, fairly brought down the house. Mr. Nurding played the accompaniments throughout the program.

When refeshments were served the men assisting, smart in their chefs' caps and aprons, marched in, lined up, and sang "Breakfast in bed on Sunday morning" as a fitting prelude to the good things that came next. Mrs H. M. Connor, worthy matron, proposed a vote of thanks to the artistes and committee. Hearty clapping and the singing of "For they are jolly good fellows" showed how thoroughly her words were endorsed. An interesting event occurred when Mrs. A. B. McGregor, who is leaving the city, was called forward, and presented by the worthy matron with a case of handsome silver spoons in appreciation of her services and long connection with Areme Chapter. Announcements were made of two coming events—a dance in the Connaught Armories on Nov. 29, and a box social and playlet in Richards Hall on Dec. 16. A thoroughly delightful evening ended with a little social dance for which Mr Tom Smith acted very efficiently as pianist.

Miss Florence Dodd, advisor to women students, University of Alberta, was "at home" on Friday afternoon, a very delightful social time being spent by the very many callers including most members of the staff, both men and women, and a great many of the parents of the girls attending the university lectures. The rotunda and reception room of Pembina were prettily decorated with lovely yellow "mums," daffodils and potted plants. Mrs H. M. Tory and Mrs. W. A. R. Kerr presided at the tea table, and were assisted in serving by the members of the house committee Misses Susie McLennan, Edith Hamilton, Marjorie Simmons, Helena Kerr and Pauline Cain.

Zero weather did not keep the members of Strathcona Review No. 2. Womens' Benefit Association, of the Maccabees and their friends, from enjoying a very pleasant whist drive and dance Friday evening in Oddfellows Hall, Richards Block, South Side.

Considering the temperature, a goodly number attended, and a merry evening was spent. Cards were played until 10:30, after which an orchestra delighted all with dance numbers till midnight. Coffee and doughnuts were served during the dance.

The prize winners at whist were: Ladies first, donated by Charles W. Fisher, Mrs. A. H. Stang; ladies second (donated by T. P. Malone), Mrs. T. S. Clark; ladies' consolation (donated by James McDonald), Miss McKillop; gentlemen's first (donated by Farnk Cowles), J. H. Tinkler; gentlemen's second (donated by H. Richards Co.)), C. The features of the evening program at the Christ Church bazaar were dances by Mrs. Duxie Van Allan and Miss Evelyn Parke and Mr. Bailey. Mrs. Van Allan's dance, 'Dance of the Nnght,' was beautifully done, the special stage lighting and lovely creation worn by the dancer adding to the artistic effect. Miss Parke and Mr. Bailey gave demonstration dances of the fox trot and waltz.

In honor of Miss Helen McLeod, a much feted bride of the near future, Mrs. W. McNeil entertained at a very charming tea on Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. J. K. Cornwall and Mrs. J. W. Heffernan were joint hostesses at the home of the former on Friday, at a very delightful and well attended silver tea in aid of the Good Shepherd home for children. Duing the afternoon Mrs. C. B. McQuiston sang most pleasingly, accompanied by Mrs. E. E. Peterson, who is a genuine "find" in the realm of accompanists.

The district meeting of the Baptist churches in Edmonton was a decided success on Wednesday afternoon and evening. The attendance was not so good in the afternoon, but some very interesting reports were received covering the missionary work of the church among the Slavic and Hungarian races in western Canada, introduced by Mrs. J. H. McIntyre, of McDonald church.

Mrs. G. A. Clarke reported on the work in Bolivia, while Mrs. J. C. Bowen reviewed the missionary work in India. Mrs. A. K. Southern brightened the session with a vocal solo.

Rev. S. Sheldon led in the discussion following the reports received from the church as to the progress that was being made to attain the objective in the missionary budget for the year. Dr. McLaurin, superintendent of missions, from Calgary, impressed strongly upon the meeting the duties of the churches in this respect, particularly this year.

After supper, which was served in the Sunday schoolroom and an hour of pleasant social intercourse, an enthusiastic gathering participated keenly in the discussion following addresses on the religious education function of the various departments of Christian work. Rev. B. I. Robert, the recently-appointed superintendent of religious education for the Baptist Church in Alberta, delivered an address on "What is religious education?" He gave a broad interpretaton to religious educaton, making it include practically all the activities of the church. He brough home definitely the responsibility of the home in any religious educational program, and stated that more time must be found for instruction in religious matters than at present is given.

G. Fred McNally introduced the discussion on the topic, "The Sunday schol's contribution in religious edutation." He delivered a spirited address, specially emphasizing the necessity of the instruction in the Sunday school should seek to establish attitude on the part of students which would express itself in a positive and aggressive Christian activity not necessarily several years hence, but immediately. If the Sunday school failed in these respects its work was scarcely worth while.

Rev. G. A. Clarke inspired the meeting with his remarks introducing the place of the Young People's society. He indicated how a properly organized society could wonderfully stimulate the young life of a church into expressional activity in Christian service.

Rev. A. D. Priddle climaxed a splendid evening by developing the responsibility of the home in religious education, indicating that the crux of the whole problem lay in the home. Without the attention the home should give, it was not possible either for the school or the church to become really effective. Mrs. P. E. Bowen and Miss Bessie Porteous rendered a pleasing duet. Miss Edna Southern and Miss Chris Eunson also sang a very pleasing number.

The Daily Poem

FANTASY

Across the river in the wood
  Where vine-clad trees abound,
I hear a melody so soft—
  The merest wraith of sound.
I think Pan pipes the elfin tune
  For some young dryad dancing
    there;
And Echo hiding in the gloom,
  Repeats the light, fantastic air.
Or else Pan left his gilded reeds
  Beneath the tree this afternoon,
And some adventurous night-wind

Mendelssohn Choir to Give "The Messiah" Just Before Christmas

Lovers of Oratorio will welcome the announcement that the Edmonton Mendelssohn Choir has completed arrangements whereby "The Messiah," Handel's greatest work will be sung in First Presbyterian Church on Wednesday evening, Dec. 14th.

An orchestra of some 35 pieces will accompany the choir, which will number about 150 voices. Vernon Barford is making strenuous demands of the singers in order to make this concert especially noteworthy.

It is the intention of the Mendelssohn Choir to sing "The Messiah" every year just before Christmas, and in doing this a custom long carried out in the Old Country will be emulated here, with the result that Edmonton will set a lead to all other Canadian cities in the matter of retaining and performing at the proper season and under the most favorable circumstances, the greatest Christmas music of all time.

As Often Acquired as Inherited.
You have eruptions and sores, and perhaps enlarged glands of the neck. This blood disease affects the internal organs, especially the lungs, and if neglected may develop into consumption.
It causes many troubles and is aggravated by impure air, unwholesome food, bad water, too much heat or cold, and want of proper exercise.
Hood's Sarsaparilla, the blood-purifying medicine that has been used with so much satisfaction by three generations is wonderfully successful in the treatment of scrofula. Give it a trial.
If a cathartic or laxative is needed take Hood's Pills.

COMPLETELY FREE OF CONSTIPATION
Tried for Years to Find Relief
"FRUIT-A-TIVES" GAVE IT
Chronic Constipation or insufficient action of the bowels, is one of the great causes of disease. Some authorities even claim that Constipation cannot be permanently corrected. This is a great mistake, because here is the proof that constipation can be cured and the bowels made to act regularly and naturally.
"Yarmouth, N. S.
"For years, I was troubled with Constipation, and had to take laxatives and purgatives all the time. If I neglected to take these, the bowels would refuse to do their work.
"About two years ago, a friend advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives,' which I did. The first box helped me so much that I obtained further supplies of the remedy and continued the treatment. After using about eight boxes, my bowels were able to perform their particular function without aid.
"The relief in my case has been lasting, as up to date I have never had any further trouble. I can recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' to all suffering as I did and I am sure they will derive equal benefit."
A. W. FRANKLIN.
"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c, or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

Women's Musical Club Members Are Guests at Government House

The members of the Women's Musical club were guests of His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Brett and Mrs. Brett, at Government house Friday afternoon, a very delightful time being spent by the large number who attended. The affair was primarily arranged in honor of Helen Davies Sherry, of Saskatoon, who through illness was prevented from coming to Edmonton to take part in the recital of the Women's Musical club, and much regret was expressed on Friday afternoon at her inability to be present.

Delicate white carnations and white 'mums mingled with maidenhair fern, in silver baskets, were the floral decorations on the pretty table which was centered with a beautiful lace runner over a pale green satin drape, and aglow with the light from the many silver-shaded candles.

Pouring tea and coffee were Mrs. Clifford Brown and Madame J. J. Duggan, while Mrs. O. J. Walker and Mrs. Vernon Barford cut the ices. Assisting in serving were Mrs. M. C. McCannel, Mrs. J. Dixon Craig, Mrs. Bernard Maxfield, Misses Helen McLeod, Phyllis Grierson Lena Secord and Marjorie Poucher.

In the reception room silver vases of lovely crimson carnations lent an artistic note to the surroundings.

Mrs. C. B. McQuiston was heard for the first time since she returned to the city after an absence of several months. That her singing was appreciated was demonstrated by the enthusiastic encore accorded her. She was wonderfully assisted by the sympathetic playing of her accompaniments by Mrs. E. E. Peterson.

A lyric, the composition of Mrs. Fred Lee, with music by Mrs. Ethel Norbury, was beautifully sung by Mrs. Bernard Maxfield, with Mrs. Norbury at the piano the rendition was charming.

Mrs. C. Stapell, who needs no formal introduction to Edmonton audiences, favored with pianoforte selections.

Some of those present during the afternoon were Mrs. David Bowman, Mrs. J. Dixon Craig, Mrs. H. W. Hunt, Mrs. P. G. Thomson, Mrs. W. J. Davis, Mrs. G. Graydon, Mrs. Ethel Lee, Mrs. K. Mitchell, Mrs. Ethel Norbury, Miss [illegible] Norbury Miss Meta Hills, Mrs. F. Lansdown, Mrs. A. M. Jeffers, Mrs. C. Walsh Mrs. D. Byrne, Mrs. A. N. Munroe Miss Sara Gray, Mrs. M. H. T. The "Sultana" Claims Your Attention

(Eleanor Gunn.)

And now, we have arrived at the place where we give our garments names, just as the manufacturers name their materials; thinking perhaps, that a negligee by any other name would be just as comfortable. So a robe of black moire satin lined with colored chiffon, the chiffon making a sort of vestee front when the coat is worn open, or a lining only when it is closed, is christened "Sultana." Such a garment may be copied in any number of the soft restful materials, for certainly a garment for relaxation should be of material that has a soothing sensation. Never have materials or color combinations been as unusual, nor as beautiful as they are now. The creators of design seem to have searched every quarter of the globe for inspirations, and the various brocade chiffon velvets, and the satins with their beautiful embroidered motifs bear witness to the fact that their efforts were not in vain.

The handsomer the material, the less likely the necessity of trimming—so after all there is a saving of both time and nervous energy, if not money, and after all saving one's self is worth something, and things even up in the long run, for what one would spend for applied trimming, can be put into material, where no trimming is needed.

And speaking of trimmings, about everything under the sun is permissable. We are beaded with "seed pearls" and wooden beads the size of marbles, and all the sizes in between, to say nothing of bands and squares and diamonds of fur, applied to the garment in the most unusual manner, for it does not follow if it is fur, that it adorns the collar and cuffs only. Someone with an unusual sense of humor, or a humorous sense of the unusual has combined fur with pink crepe in making sets of undies! There are also fur garters, though one has yet to learn just what advantage fur has over elastic for this particular purpose.

Boudoir sets, consisting of garters, mules and boudoir bandeaux with the airiest possible trimmings are quite unique in character. Marabou, metal lace, ribbon, fur and feathers being some of the materiols used. One of the sets shows pink satin mules with a border of blue marabou around the toe, also a rosette of marabou around the bandeaux which is made of silver lace. Pink pearls are used on a bandeaux which has bows at the ends and ties [illegible] metal and colored ribbons. Yellow satin mules have fur trimmings and a tiny tassel of gold slightly at one side of the center. A black set is interesting. Gold and flowers trim the slippers. The garters in every case are of flowered ribbons are finished with tiny gold ribbons or bows. White pearls and a row of colored ribbon flowers trim the black bandeaux, which is made of net embroidered in gold, and finished with gold lace. With the approaching Yuletide, nimble fingers with a few bits of lace and ribbons might fashion some very pretty gifts that would be out of the ordinary as gifts.

Balance Wheels.

The body is composed of many complex organisms finely co-ordinated by nerves and muscles. Each of these organisms has its own activities,—heart, lungs, brain, and the rest, but for normal living each must act properly in relation to the whole. Many of the seemingly small and insignificant details plan an amazingly important part in the management of the whole machine. They are like tiny balance wheels which regulate the coordinated working of an intricate machine. There are glands, such as the pancreas and the thyroid. If the pancreas gets upset the body may lose the power to burn carbohyrate and thus be deprived of this important fuel food. If the thyroid becomes too active, the body may burn fuel faster than it can be supplied, and the resulting emaciation cannot be cured except by righting the action of the thyroid.

All the chemical elements of the body must not only be there, but in the very place and quantity where they are needed. The blood is kept in good condition of red and white corpuscles, the heart beats nerve muscles respond promptly to brain impulses, largely through the presence of phosphorus, calcium, magnesium, sodium and potassium in the tissues and fluids where they belong. Water helps to regulate this distribution, to make possible the transportation of these chemicals by holding them in solution in the body fluids, and to facilitate the removal of waste through the kidneys. The right foods and plenty of water keep the body balance wheels in good order.

BOY SCOUTS' CORNER

ELEVENTH EDMONTON.

Surgical operations formed an interesting feature of last Friday's meet of the Eleventh troop at St. Luke's hall at Bonnie Doon. Scout Secretary Jack Peterson with a creditable showing of esperit de corps, agreed to allow the Scout surgeons to operate upon him without the use of anesthetics. As a result of the ensuing butchery, sundy tin cans, fountain pens, and pieces of rubber pipe were removed from his interior. He is feeling much better now, thanks! This is one of the acts to be put on at the forthcoming jamboree, and it should be seen to realize what humanity suffers.

Mr. Adshead, Sr., kindly came over to the meeting and arranged this stunt, and also is helping the Scouts to put some other original items on the program. Patrol Leader Ralph Adshead came to the scene of action armed with a series of splints which he had made, and as a result, the ambulance section had an interesting drill. The cubs are busy practising a "crazy jig" in addition to an Indian pow-wow, and it may also be said that their lungs are in excellent condition! Harold Bradley, Ted Bumstead, Maurice Flowers, and Harry Miller are all trying for their second class badge, and so far have passed the first aid section.

On Wednesday about 35 Scouts and Cubs turned out, and in addition to the usual tactics, the four Scouts mentioned previously, passed their final test for the second class badge. The number of Cubs attached to the Eleventh troop is rapidly growing and the services of a Cubmaster are urgently required. At present the small fellows are in charge of Patrol Leader Flowers and Scout Frank Glennie.

Saturday evening's jamboree at the Prince of Wales' armories will see the Bonnie Doon troop out in force. The troop will fall in at the St. Luke's hall at 6 p.m. take the car to the north side, and arrive at the armories to take part in the opening drill, which commences at 7 p.m.

KEEP HEALTHY DURING WINTER

Colds and Diseases May Be Avoided if the Blood Is Kept Pure

Do not let your blood get thin this winter. For people who have a tendency towards anaemia, or bloodlessness, winter is a trying season. Lack of exercise and fresh air, and the more restricted diet, are among the many things that combine to lower the tone of the body and deplete the blood.

As soon as you notire the tired feeling, lack of appetite and shortness of breath that are warning symptoms of thin blood, take a short course of treatment with Dr. Williams Pink Pills. Do not wait until the color has entirely left your cheeks, until your lips are white and your eyes dull. It is so much easier to correct thinning of the blood in the earlier stages than later. This is well illustrated in the case of Mrs. F. Williams, Elk Lake, Ont., who says: "I take great pleasure in letting you know the benefit I have found in the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I was in an anaemic condition, and was very weak and run down. The least exertion would leave me breathless and it was with difficulty that I did household work. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after the use of four boxes I felt like a new person. In fact, my system seemed filled with new energy and new life. I strongly recommend this medicine to all who feel weak or run down."

The purpose of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is to build up the blood. They do this one thing and they do it well. They are for this reason an invaluable remedy in diseases arising from bad or deficient blood, as rheumatism, neuralgia, after-effects of the grip or fevers. The pills are guaranteed to be free from opiates or any harmful drug and cannot injure the most delicate system.

You can procure Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or they will be sent you by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing direct to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PRACTICAL PARAGRAPHS.

To clean a window shade, tack it to the floor or a table and go over it with a magic paper cleaner, or else rub it with a rough flannel dipped in dry flour or starch. If the lower edge is faded, reverse the shade, tacking the bottom edge to the roller and making a new hem.

• • •

If you have curtains that need starching and stretching, and no frames to stretch them on, tack down a sheet on the floor of an unused room, measure accurately the length the curtain must be to fit the window and rule a pencil line on the sheet to mark the ends. Make the damp curtain come to the mark for length then stretch sidewise as much as the material will allow.

Experience has taught most people to dry wet and muddied boots slowly lest they shrink and harden. Some people stuff damp shoes with tissue paper to preserve the shape and help absorb the moisture, others fill them with warm oats or bran. Afterward they need a dressing which contains oil. A standard mixture for the purpose is made by combining a quarter of an ounce of spermaceti oil, three ounces of treacle, four ounces of powdered lamp-black, adding at the last a cup of vinegar.

• • •

If shoes are much worn in the damp without overshoes the soles should be water-proofed. Most shoe dealers carry a preparation for the purpose, or a two-to-one mixture of melted mutton tallow and rosin may be applied at home. You will find that the soles not only defy water after such treatment but wear longer.

HELPING NEEDY ONES.

APPEALS JUDGMENT

Harvey Challenger of Edgerton Alta., an appellant in the supreme court here against Bud Simmerman was the loser in the action which came before the full court en banc Thursday in the dispute over a lighting plant. In the lower court Challenger, the plaintiff, lost his action and carried the matter to the appellate division again he had his case dismissed with costs, by Justices of Appeal Stuart, Beck, McCarthy, Ives and Clarke.

Van Allen Simpson and company were the solicitors for Simmerman in the case.

In a slander action brought by Mary Dyhod against Iluca Paburan of Smoky Lake, the plaintiff was successful Mr. Justice Simmons allowing the amount of her claim for damages and the costs of the action.

BREAD-MAKING DEMONSTRATED.

Mrs. B. Graham demonstrated the making of bread at last month's meeting of the Redland View W.I. held at the home of Mrs. Peterson. It was decided to expend the sum of one dollar per month for toys or fruit for a little boy of the neighborhood who is ill in the Calgary hospital. The members are planning a bazaar later.

THIN, FLAT HAIR GROWS LONG, THICK AND ABUNDANT

"Danderine" costs only 35 cents a bottle. One application ends all dandruff, stops itching and falling hair, and, in a few moments, you have doubled the beauty of your hair. It will appear a mass, so soft, lustrous and easy to do up. But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. "Danderine" is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. This delightful, stimulating tonic helps thin, lifeless, faded hair to grow long, thick, heavy and luxuriant.

WOMAN NAMED AS RETURNING OFFICER IN MEDICINE HAT

For the first time in the history of the province of Alberta, a woman has been appointed returning officer for the coming provincial elections. This honor and duty has fallen to Mrs. Winnifred Grace Baker (Mrs. Angus A. Baker), of Medicine Hat, one of the constituencies to be thrown open again since their member, Hon. Perren Baker was raised to the cabinet. Mrs. Baker has been a prominent worker in the Medicine Hat constituency and did good work there during the last campaign. She is also well known in the various women's societies of the town, and is generally considered an exceptionally capable woman. They are farmers, but live in the city of Medicine Hat.

The other returning officers for the provincial by-election are: Frank Gough, Okotoks; Walter Smitten, Calgary; Gilbert S. Shane, Vermilion; K. O. Eggen, Camrose; Thos. Page Baker, Ponoka; Roderick McKenzie, Peace River.

Nominations take place Dec. 2 and the elections Dec. 9. There is no further news from the constituency of Peace River, except that Premier Greenfield states that the petitions asking him to run in that constituency continue to come into him in numbers. He does not anticipate any serious difficulty in the changing of the constituetion of the Peace River U.F.A. organization, that will allow an outsider to run. This situation will however, probably have the effect of loosening up some of the hide-bound regulations of the various organizations.

WOULT NOT BE WITHOUT BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. W. Beesley, Mille Roche, Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past eight months and would not be without them. I used them for indigestion and teething and my baby is cutting his teeth without any trouble whatever. I can highly recommend the Tablets to other mothers." What Mrs. Beesley says thousands of other mothers say. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach, thus driving out constipation and indigestion and making teething easy. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Large Steamer Is Reported Ashore Off English Coast

London Nov. 18—(Canadian Press)—Urgent distress messages were received yesterday morning at Deal, south-east England, that a large steamer was ashore in that vicinity in a thick haze. A Deal lifeboat and numerous motor boats proceeded to offer assistance and found the steamer Cairngowan bound for Montreal from Leith in ballast. Subsequently it was released and anchored off Deal where the crew is now busy clearing the decks of huge quantities of sand which was washed aboard by the heavy seas.

Growing Deaf With Head Noises? Try This

If you are growing hard of hearing and fear Catarrhal Deafness or if you have roaring, rumbling, hissing noises in your ears go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who is threatened with catarrhal deafness or who has head noises should give this prescription a trial.

ONLY WELL DEVELOPED PULLETS WILL BE HEAVY WINTER LAYERS; FEED AND CARE VERY IMPORTANT

Expert Poultry Breeder Gives Methods of Feeding for Winter Egg Production—Pullets Should Be Fed Three Times a Day—Meat Meal in Mash Is Necessary—Pullets Should Start to Lay at Six Months of Age

The essentials of winter egg production as has been demonstrated by hundreds of practical poultrymen are well developed pullets of suitable breeding, and proper feed and care. According to Joe Shackleton of Edmonton, superintendent of the provincial poultry plant who has had over twenty five years experience in practical poultry breeding and who is considered an authority on poultry, given these three essentials, there is no reason why anyone cannot produce eggs during the winter months, either on a farm, as a back yard proposition, or an a commercial scale. The first essential is well developed pullets of suitable breeding. Birds of two or three years of age, regardless of their breeding or what their previous record has been cannot be expected to be heavy winter layers. Only well developed pullets will give the maximum egg yield during the winter months, and unless the poultryman has such or can secure them, he cannot expect heavy winter egg production.

Feed and Care

While it is essential to have pullets of suitable breeding and well developed, feed and care also plays a major part in successful winter egg production. Without the proper feed and care, says Mr. Shackleton, the best pullets that money can buy cannot be expected to give high egg yields during the winter months and instead of yielding a profit are often a loss to the owner. Egg production requires a well balanced ration, and must include the various elements that go to make up the egg. Mr Shackleton does not recommend any of the high priced commercial feeds but has found from experience that the best results are obtained when grain mixtures, mashes consisting of ground grain and meat meal with sufficient succulent feeds are fed. He recommends feeding pullets three times a day, and the methods of feeding recommended are those which are being used by him with good results.

Wet Mash

A light feed of grain, either wheat or oats is fed in the morning in deep litter, and the water pans are filled with fresh warm water. Not more than a handful of grain should be fed to three birds and should always be fed in deep litter. Mr. Shackleton lays special emphasis on the deep litter. Two or three inches of clean straw litter on the floor will make the birds hunt for the grain, and this gives them the exercise that is absolutely essential to egg production. The noon feed consists of a wet mash. A mash that has been found to give good results and at present prices of grain to be very economical consists of 20 lbs. bran, 20 lbs. shorts, 20 lbs. oat chop, 20 lbs. barley chop and 20 lbs. meat meal. This mixture is moistened with water until it is of a crumbly consistancy, and should not be so wet as to be sloppy. The mash is fed in small quantities, only as much being fed at a meal as the birds will eat in ten minutes. Besides feeding a wet mash, a dry mash of the same mixture is always kept in troughs before the birds.

Meat Meal Necessary

The object in feeding a wet mash as well as a dry mash is to encourage the birds to eat more. The birds relish a wet mash and will eat it after they have left the dry mash but care should be observed that they are not fed more than they will eat up in ten minutes. When they are fed more of the wet mash than they can eat in this time they will not take sufficient animal matter in the ration. At the present it costs $2.50 per hundred, but Mr. Shackleton says that no one raising poultry can afford to do without it. In cold weather when there is danger of the wet mash freezing it can be dispensed with. In some instances, Mr. Shackleton has found that splendid results have been obtained when only the dry mash was fed, but on the whole the best results are usually obtained where both the dry mash and wet mash is fed.

The evening meal consists of a mixture of whole grain, the most practical mixture being 40 lbs. barley, 40 lbs. wheat and 20 lbs. oats. A handful of this mixture is fed every two birds in the flock early enough in the evening so as to give the birds time to scratch in the litter for the grain before dark.

Succulent Feeds

Succulent feeds such as sprouted oats, mangles, cabbage or green sheaves cannot be omitted from the ration if the best results are to be obtained. Sprouted oats is especially recommended by Mr. Shackleton in preference to the other kinds of succulent feeds. Mr. Shackleton also recommends an occasional feed of cooked barley which is fed in the place of the wet mash at noon.

Only pullets of the proper breeding and proper development under ordinary conditions can be expected to start laying early in the fall and continue to lay well through the winter months, and this being the case preparation for winter egg production should be started in the spring. Pullets hatched not later than the second week in May, if properly cared for during the summer will start to lay when they are six months old. Both the heavy and light breeds mature earlier and will start to lay before the heavier breeds, but Mr. Shackleton's experience has been that they all mature at about the same age Last year a Plymouth Rock pullet at the provincial poultry plant started to lay at four and a half months, but this was an outstanding case

During October the pullets are separated from the cockerels and put in their winter quarters and all of the stunted pullets or any with defects are killed off. A stunted pullet cannot be expected to lay well, and Mr. Shackleton has found it is the best to kill them off as soon as possible.

RECEIPTS OF CREAM FALLING OFF RAPIDLY

Cream Prices Have Advanced 3c—Increase in Price of Creamery Butter

Cream receipts from country points have fallen off considerably during the past week and with a continuation of present weather conditions production will soon be down to a winter basis.

Cream prices have increased 3c per pound, which brings the price up to 37c per pound butter fat for special 34c for No. 1 and 31c for No. 2, f.o.b. shipping stations. The make of butter is fairly light at present and is taken care of by the local trade. Creamery butter has also increased in price and is retailing at 50c for No. 1 and 55c for No. 2.

SAT. FARM—DEMAND FOR . . . . . .

The potato market is still very quiet but with the cold weather coming on, indications are that the demand will improve considerably during the next month. Up to the present practically all of the larger markets have been depending upon the supply of potatoes in their immediate districts. As a result as soon as the weather has become too cold to haul the potatoes to market without danger of freezing dealers are of the opinion that there will be a fairly good demand for potatoes from outside points. While it is not expected that there will be any large increase in price a general pick up of the market is expected.

During the past week some potatoes have been shipped to Calgary, but the demand is very limited and at from 35c to 50c per bushel farmers are not very anxious to sell. Small quantities of potatoes are being retailed in the city market at prices ranging from 50c to 75c per bushel in small lots.

HARDY VARIETIES OF STRAWBERRIES.

At the University of Alberta, the horticultural department has proven that the Senator Dunlop variety of strawberry does best under the conditions obtaining there. Little test work has been done with the everbearing varieties which are coming into favor further east.

SEEDING FALL RYE WITH WHEAT

When fall rye is seeded with wheat in the spring will there be much of a crop the next year? If fall rye is seeded lake in the fall and does not sprout will it produce a crop the next year?

J. R. ASKINS,

Czar, Alberta.

Fall rye if seeded with wheat in the spring would produce a considerable seed that year, especially if it was seeded very early. The percentage of seed shoots sent up would however depend largely upon the nature of the season. Under normal conditions after the wheat crop had been harvested a fairly good fall pasture could be expected. The crop the next year would under most conditions be very light. When the two crops are seeded together it would not be wise to seed over three pecks of each to the acre.

Prof. J. R. Fryer of the University of Alberta found that when fall rye was seeded very early in the spring low temperatures acted in the nature of a stimulent which had the effect on the crop of throwing up seed shoots the same year and producing a crop of grain. It would be impossible, however to predict just what the results of seeding wheat with rye under all conditions would be. It is quite likely that both the yield of wheat and the rye the following year would be somewhat lighter than when seeded alone.

When fall rye is seeded late in the fall a good crop will be produced the following spring which can be pastured until June 15, and then allowed to mature seed. Last year Prof. Fryer seeded fall rye the last part of October. The seed did not germinate until the following spring and produced a splendid crop. Where there is a considerable moisture in the soil and the temperature too low for the seed to germinate for any length of time, there is always the danger of the seed rotting.

On the whole the best results are obtained with fall rye when the crop is seeded from July 15 to August 1. When seeded at this time a good fall and spring pasture will be produced. In the spring it is not advisable to pasture the rye later than June 15, if it is intended to produce a crop of grain. Early seeding usually results in a better fall pasture, while seeding August 1, or later usually results in a lighter fall pasture but a better spring pasture.

EGG RECEIPTS LOW AND PRICES ARE INCREASING

Advance of from Five to Six Cents per Dozen During Past Week

Fresh eggs are getting very scarce and dealers are paying as high as $12.75 per case for straight receipts, and from 50c to 58c per dozen on grades. This is an advance of from 5 to 6c per dozen over last week and at the rate at which receipts are decreasing most of the dealers are of the opinion that the prices for fresh eggs will continue to go up. The receipts sent in by farmers for the most part are of exceptionally high quality.

Receipts from country stores show indications of having been held for some time before shipment and as a result the grade is low. Some of the shipments include eggs that have been stored in water glass. For this grade of eggs dealers are quoting as low as $9.25 per case which is somewhat lower than during the previous week.

YELLOW SWEET CLOVER GIVES GOOD RESULTS

Hardiest of Four Varieties Tested At Olds—Seeded With Nurse Crop

Tests are being conducted with the different varieties of biennial sweet clover at the school of agriculture at Olds, to determine which is the most suitable for the conditions existing at that point. Of four varieties under test the yellow blossom has proven up to the present to be the hardiest variety. Not only does it yield well, but sufficient seed falls to the ground when the crop is being harvested to re-seed the crop from year to year. Sweet clover has been found, for this section of the country, to be superior to any other clover or grass when seeded with a nurse crop. Principal F. Grisdale says that this point is very evident in the work being done at all of the agricultural schools. It does well when seeded broadcast and under such conditions gives the best yields, and when seeded in rows the closer the rows are together the higher the yields.

PROGRESS IN PURE SEED PRODUCTION

Large Quantities of Registered Seed Oats Available This Year

In connection with the Alberta Crop Improvement Association, an organization interested in the production of registered and improved seed, Prof. G. H. Cutler, of the Department of Field Husbandry, University of Alberta, says that the work is giving excellent returns, in fact, even better to date than could reasonably have been counted upon, so far, and he anticipates that the scheme will be a solution so far as the production of registered seed is concerned in Alberta, and the next step contemplated is in the direction of installing cleaning machinery at central points, for the cleaning and grading of the seed produced by the growers. In view of the interest and enthusiasm shown by the members as evidenced by the quality of the product they are producing, and the care and effort they are prepared to put forth in preparing clean land and rogueing the crops, threshing, etc., it is felt that there is scarcely any limit to the amount of high-class seed that can be produced by the scheme.

At the present time there are over 2,000 members under Section One of the Association and 113 growers of registered seed under Secton Two. Section One includes those who are doing co-operative testing, that is members who are testing under local conditions new and untried varieties and strains produced by the University. Members who are producing registered and improved seed for commercial distribution are enrolled under Section Two.

With the inspection work only partly completed, Professor Cutler believes they will have a good many thousand bushels of second generation Victory and Banner oats eligible for registration and available for seed this year.

It should be borne in mind that this is only the second year of the work, and that most of the growers commenced a year ago with only a small quantity of elite seed. An instance of how quickly results can be obtained is indicated by the work of two individuals, J. A. George of Lloydminster and Wallace Ball of West Salisbury, who obtained three and six bushels of Elite seed resepctively in 1920. These men will have more than 4,000 and 9,000 bushels of second generation seed respectively resulting from their original stock.

STEM ROT HAS BEEN FOUND ON SUNFLOWER CROP IN MANITOBA

A disease of the cultivated sunflower, taking the form of stem rot, has made its appearance in Manitoba during the seasons of 1920 and 1921. Dr. Bisby of the Manitoba agricultural college, states that the disease is characterized by a rotting of the stem, usually at the surface of the ground, and by wilting of the plants. Certain weeds may also be affected, as well as carrots, parsnips, and other plants. The fungus lives over winter in the soil. It attacks sunflowers when they have attained considerable growth, and the fungus spreads rapidly in the field. Sunflowers should not be replanted on fields which have been effected.

MOOSE SHOT IN NORTH SHOWN IN P. BURNS STORE

Shot by Fred Kellogg at Tawatinaw—Moose Quite Plentiful This Year

The first moose of the season has made its appearance in the P. Burns butcher shop on Jasper last Thursday, and was shipped to Edmonton from Tawatinaw, where it was shot by Fred Kellog. The moose is a very fine specimen with splendid antlers and weighs about six hundred pounds. The manager of the butcher shop expects that as soon as the ground is covered with snow and the moose can be more easily hunted, that quite a number of moose is a very fine specimen with splening settlements in the north country. As a rule fairly large numbers of moose are shot in the districts tributary to Athabasca Landing, and reports from there indicate that they are quite plentiful this year.

A Rare Delicacy

Moose meat wolle it sells for about the same price is considered by most people to be a rare delicacy and for this reason hunters never have any difficulty in disposing of the moose that they shoot to the Edmonton butcher shops. It may be merely the novelty or the superior flavor of the meat which temps people to buy mose steak in favor of any other kind of meat, at any rate butchers in Edmonton never have to offer moose meat at reduced rates in order to find buyers. A buffalo from the Wainwright park was sold by the P. Burns Co. at Thanksgiving and proved to be even more of a novelty than moose meat. For the Christmas trade they expect to be able to secure a number of deer and bear which as delicacies are considered to be equal if not superior to moose

Winnipeg Case Is Continued Before The Privy Council

London Nov. 18—(Canadian Press)—Argument was continued yesterday in the appeal before the privy council in which the province of Manitoba seeks to establish the findings of the board of appraisers who investigated the construction of the Manitoba parliament buildings and appraised the work of the contractors, the Messrs. Kelly.

Argument largely turned on the alleged misconduct in the relations between the two arbitrators and the umpire of the appraisal board.

Sir John Simon, counsel for the province, said the respondents had alleged that Arbitrator Oxton wrote to Arbitrator MacDonald of Montreal offering him the report of the royal commission on parliament buildings construction, to read on the journey to Winnipeg.

"Anybody travelling between Montreal and Winnipeg would be grateful for anything to read," remarked Sir John Simon.

Severe Sentences Handed Out to Men Who Hoarded Arms

The fifth prisoner, Donohue, was given a four-year term.

Labor Conference Will Discuss Use Of White Lead

London, Nov. 18. — (Canadian Press.)—A Reuter despatch from Geneva says that on the resumption of the discussion at the international labor conference on the report of the committee on the use of white lead which is held to be injurious to workmen, Phillip Roy, commissioner-general for Canada in Paris, said he did not share the opinion of the Canadian government delegates on the question. He thought it was a question of conflict of interests. Mr. Roy favored the prohibition of the use of white lead in the interest of humanity.

The conference finally adopted by a vote of 44 to 45, the French government delegation's amendment favoring a draft convention prohibiting the use of white lead in iterior and exterior painting and providing a series of regulations for the protection of workers using the pigment.

The result evoked cheers from the workers' delegates although it is doubtful whether the two-thirds majority required for the convention is attainable.

Sadie Slinker's

Sloping Shoulders!

THERE was a natural tendency in Sadie Slinker's family to stoop, and Sadie was proud of it as a sign of aristocracy, especially as the smart magazine and styles book models affected the same attitude. So Sadie Slinker's sloping shoulders became both cultivated and natural and so did an asthmatic cough and wheeze.

The stoop at the base of the neck and running down between the shoulders is characteristic of the spinal disorder that produces asthma. The forward hips curve, which was part of Sadie's claim to beauty, is characteristic of those suffering from chronic weakness of the lower organs.

Alberta Scores a Gain of Over Fifty Per Cent.

All things considered, Albertans have cause to be very well satisfied with the report of the census-takers. For the last seven years of the past decade the conditions have been such as to practically paralyze immigration; and in the year preceding conditions developed which seemed to show that the country could not go on absorbing new-comers in anything like the numbers of previous years. War or no war, the outlook in 1913 was for a slowing down in the inward movement, and a corresponding slackening in the rate of growth of the population of the Western provinces. When war came the movement stopped, and it has not yet got back to even a modified normal.

Despite these forbidding circumstances it is found that the population of Alberta in the ten year period has gone up from 374,663 to 581,995, an advance of 207,332, or of 55.34 per cent. That is to say, the population of 1911 has been increased by substantially more than one-half. There are now three people in Alberta for each two who were here ten years ago. That would be a fair rate of growth for a ten year period in anything but boom times. For growth in war time, and after deducting the losses due to the war and to the "flu" epidemic which swept the land three years ago, it is decidedly good.

One most favorable feature of the report is the showing that it is in the country, rather than in the cities and towns that the growth has occurred. Of the cities, only two—Edmonton and Medicine Hat—show a gfireater percentage growth than the 55.34 per cent. gain registered for the whole province. Of the towns only six grew faster than the province as a whole. The great bulk of our new population is on the land.

The six cities in the province record a total growth of 53,343, only one of them showing a loss. The thirty towns, having each a population of 800 or over, show an aggregate gain of 13,546 four of them reporting a shrinkage. Taken together the cities and towns show an increase of 66,889, the balance, 140,443, representing the gain in the farming population.

The rural population is thus shown to be growing more than twice as fast as the population of the cities and towns. That in itself is as important as the fact that the whole population is getting larger. It proves that the development that is taking place is of the safe and sane type. It is not based on imaginary values of city real estate or speculative anticipations of any kind; but upon the actual production of wealth, mainly upon the production of farm crops and fuel, both necessities, both produced in surplus quantities, both capable of indefinitely vaster production, and both dependable as premanent sources of income. Not only is our population growing; it is growing in the right place.

Among the cities, Edmonton still takes second place in population, but it holds first place in the rate of growth. In the ten year period Edmonton increased its population 88.73 per cent, against 44.42 per cent for Calgary. Edmonton's only real competitor in growth is Medicine Hat, which reports a gain of 70.74 per cent. At present Calgary has a lead of approximately 4,500. In ten years more, at the same rate of growth, Edmonton will lead the list with a population of 110,000, with Calgary second with 90,000.

The increase shown in the total population of the province will determine how many additional members Alberta will receive when the redistribution of parliamentary seats is made. What the number will be cannot be calculated until the growth of the population of Quebec is known. In 1911 that province had a population of 2,003,232. It has a permanent representation of 65 members in the House of Commons. The present basis of representation is therefore 30,819; and that is the electoral standard for the Dominion. If Quebec showed no increase in population during the last ten years, Alberta's gain of 207,000 would entitle this province to 6 additional members—or, allowing for the odd numbers, to 7. Quebec, however, has also been growing, and is known to have been growing fairly rapidly. That will raise the number of people required per member, and thus cut down the extra representation secured by Alberta. Perhaps it would be a fairly safe guess that Alberta will get 4 extra members as a result of the redistribution making a total of 16 against its present quota of 12.

In Bad Again.

Mr. James Murdock is getting to be about as unpopular with Conservative papers as the Board of Commerce used to be with the sugar-consuming public.

Not "Going" Yet.

In Detroit, where they must turn out an automobile about every time the clock ticks, it is found that there are now 10,000 more horses than there were in 1917, and 30,000 more than there were ten years ago. It may be that the horse is doomed to become extinct, as so often foretold, and his place taken by the motor vehicle: but he hasn't been started down the slide yet. In fact at the present rate he seems pretty likely to outlast the oil supply—and then which one will be on the road to extinction?

Might Easily Have Been Worse.

The Edmonton Exhibition association came through the year with a loss of only $1,200. Under the circumstances the emphasis should be placed on the "only" rather than on the loss. The big summer fair was held under conditions which necessarily cut down the gate receipts heavily. People generally were trying to save money. And the provincial election campaign kept thousands away who otherwise would likely have spent a day or so at the fair. That the loss was not greater is a matter for congratulation.

British Election?

The motto of Ulster is "no surrender." Whether or not one agrees with the semi-religious feeling out of which that slogan grew, he has to admit that the Ulsterites are a race of people who are peculiarly likely to stand by it. Just at present they are stalling the arrangement negotiated by Lloyd George and the Sinn Fein, are telling the Premier without any circumlocution that he has betrayed them, and are calling upon the Unionists of Great Britain to justify their title to the name. It is not beyond the possibilities that a general election in Britain will be the next step in the progress of the Irish controversy, accompanied by a break-down of the coalition and a re-alignment on the traditional party basis.

At Pouce Coupe.

The Imperial Oil Company are just about as communicative on the subject of what they have found and are expecting to find at the Pouce Coupe well as Lenin is about what is going on in Russia. Still, reports do manage to leak out occasionally, and of a kind to raise high hopes of a great oil strike being made there. The latest of them is to the effect that the gas pressure has risen tremendously, that gasolene is being forced through the joints in the casing, and that the drillers are wondering how they are going to control the rush of oil if the drill punches through the sandstone covering of the underground reservoir. If the pressure is as great as reported, and if the drill is aimed straight for the deposit, there will be some lively times around that well, and some difficult and dangerous work for the crew, when that occurs. All the same, here's hoping that it happens.

SHOPS EMPLOYING 2,000 MEN ARE CLOSED.

Montreal Nov. 17.—The shops of the Canadian Car and Foundry company at Saint Pierre-Aux-Liens, and at Turcot, near here, have practically closed down today. The shut down is said to be temporary and it is expected the plant will re-open around the end of December. The plant employed about 2,000 men, when fully operated.

This department does not pretend to be infallible. It will endeavor, however, to answer questions sent to it by readers of The Bulletin to the best of its ability reserving the right to ignore all that are trifling or of concern only to the questioner.

To receive attention, every inquiry must bear the name and address of the questioner. This information is not wanted for publication but as an evidence of good faith. Address your enquiries to Terchus, Editorial Dept.

Re-silvering mirrors orders are received at Norwood Confectionery store cor. 95th street and 111th ave., Edmonton.

Where can I obtain full information in regard to the oil regulations governing the North West Territories.

Make application to Alex. Norquay, Dominion Land Office, Edmonton.

It is over 600,000.

Can you tell me the exact number of drilling rigs in operation in the North Country.

We have not the exact information available.

What is the present address of Hon. Sir Douglas Colin Cameron.

A communication addressed to Government House, Winnipeg. Will reach him.

In what year was the late Lord Rhondda, created a baron, and what was his name?

He was made a baron in 1916. His name was David Alfred Thomas.

In reply to the query asking where re-silvering of mirrors can be done: we have been furnished the following address: Novelty Art and Picture Framing Shop, 9539 Jasper avenue, Edmonton.

How many voters does each member of Parliament represent?

Approximately thirty thousand. The basis of representation is "redistributed" after each census. Sixty-five seats are given Quebec; the population of that province is divided by 65, and constituencies are mapped out covering the rest of Canada, each containing approximately this number of people.

Is there a book giving the records of the Conservative and Liberal parties, authentic and without prejudice?

We know of no such book. Possibly the best and most complete record of the political history of Canada is to be found in "Canada and Its Provinces" published in 24 volumes by Glasgow, Brook & Co., of Toronto. It may be consulted in the Edmonton Public Library.

DEPT. FAILS TO EXPLAIN.

Editor, The Bulletin:

Sir,—Money and banks are very important factor in our business institutions and I think that it behooves every intelligent citizen to get all the reliable information possible in order to be able to take an intelligent part in the affairs of the government.

Information can be best given and received when the subject is approached from an unbiased and unprejudiced standpoint.

The question of money has interested me for a long time and I am writing for information and not for controversy.

I was a supporter of the Liberal candidate nominated in Edmonton for members in the provincial legislature, because I felt at the time that the farmers and others could get all that the circumstances would permit from the Liberal government.

I am not personally interested the outcome of the present election, but am sorry that the question of finance and banking can not be discussed as to facts and merits without resorting to personal abuse.

I never heard Mr. Geo. Bevington speak and do not know what he has said that would justify Mr. Andrew H. Allen to resort to the kind of language that he used in his letter in The Bulletin, nor have I any personal interest in either of those persons, but I am interested in the fundamental principles governing the issuing of money and the manner in which it is placed in circulation. In order to get that information I wrote the minister of finance, Ottawa, on July 27th, asking how money is issued and how it is put in circulation.

Dear Sir: "I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of July 27th. In reply I have to advise you that the government issues notes of denominations 25 cents $1, $2, $5, $500, $1,000, and $5000. These notes are placed in circulation through the medium of the chartered banks. That is the banks apply to the government offices of distribution for these notes and issue them to the public. The banks issue notes $5, $10, $20, $50 and $100. These notes are not guaranteed by the government.

"Under the Bank Act they have first lein on the assets of the banks. The banks are required to maintain with the government a deposit equal to 5 per cent. of their note circulation as a note circulation redemption fund and in event of the bank going into liquidation and the assets not being sufficient to redeem its outstanding note circulation, the unredeemed portion would be redeemed through the bank circulation redemption fund."

"Under the Finance Act—As a war measure the government was empowered to issue Dominion notes to banks upon deposit with the government of approved securities as collateral for the notes issued."

The above statements refer to Dominion and bank notes but say nothing about them being guaranteed by gold.

I am interested only in getting the facts. If all notes issued and circulated as money are secured by gold, why did the department of finance not make that plain in its reply?

WEST KOOTENAY LIBERAL RETIRES.

RIORDON OF TICONDEROGA.

Toronto Globe:

Sir Henry Drayton in speaking of the failure of the Government of Canada to collect $800,000 due by the Riordon Company for Federal taxes which have remained unpaid for several years, asserts that "the company is in the same situation as any other company that is now, and has been, unable to pay its business profits tax, many instances, the profits actually earned had been invested in plant extensions or supplies. The rule followed by the Government has been to collect the taxes at the earliest possible moment short of a Sheriff's sale."

Does this explanation meet the case of the Riordon Company, which has apparently paid the taxes due by it to the Government of Canada for only one year—1919—since the passage of the Business Profits War Tax measure in 1916? Was the company in financial straits when its taxes for 1916 and 1917 became due? That can be answered without reserve in the negative. The Riordon Company was a highly flourishing concern in 1918, when, at the latest, these taxes should have been collected, and when every patriotic Canadian was being urged to aid the Government to the limit of his financial ability in the winning of the war.

The Montreal Gazette on February 22, 1917, told its readers of the "brilliant financial statement" for 1916 then going forward to the Riordon company's shareholders. Riordon had earned 26 per cent on common, The Gazette assured its readers. It had carried forward, after paying dividends and bonus of 4½ per cent., the great sum of $963 236. "This surplus, however," said The Gazette, "is subject to the deduction of any amount that may be payable for the year under the Business Profits Tax." The company's own statements for the years 1916 and 1917 noted that no provision had been made in respect of Government taxation for these years. The statement for 1917 showed that bank loans, which were almost a million dollars at the beginning of 1917, had been wiped out partly by the sale of bonds and partly out of earnings.

While the Riordon Company—which in effect meant Charles Riordon and Carl Riordon, who contralled the majority of stock and held the chief executive offices—failed to make provision for the payment of the company's share of the taxes required to carry on the war, what disposition was being made of the accumulating surplus? The Riordons were investing this money in the United States, where they were required to pay taxes promptly to the Government of that country. The annual report of the Riordon Company for 1916, published early in 1917, states that "on November 21, 1916, your Directors purchased a majority interest in the capital stock of the Ticonderoga Pulp and Paper Company of Ticonderoga, New York, who have been our largest customers for many years. The product of the Ticonderoga Company, about 30,000 tons of soda pulp and high-grade book papers, for the year 1917, has been sold at prices very much in excess of those obtained during 1916. From a perusal of the Ticonderago balance sheet, copy of which is printed herewith, your Directors feel sure that you will be satisfied with the value of the properties purchased.

Ticonderoga flourished. In the year 1917 the American company, of which the Riordons had become the principal owners, paid 20 per cent. on its common stock and earned altogether $881,426 on assets valued in the balance sheet at about three and a quarter million dollars. That was but a beginning. By the spring, 1919 the Riordon Company—which had in the meanwhile determined to plunge into the Kipawa adventure instead of paying its taxes to the Government of Canada—was in a position to announce through its brokers that "during the year 1918 Ticonderoga paid a total of $649,000 in dividends on $388 000 of common stock, of which disbursement the Riordon Company's share was sufficient to pay nearly one and one-half times the interest on all outstanding Riordon bonds, including the new issue."

How can such a report, showing as it does the colossal profits then being earned in the pulp and paper trade, be reconciled with the company's failure to pay its rapidly-mounting tax arrears? How could Sir Henry Drayton—or his predecessor, Sir Thomas White—have failed so utterly in his duty as to permit the Riordons to go scot-free of National taxes while these vast sums were being paid out in dividends?

We have shown that the Riordon Company was abundantly able to pay its taxes in the years 1916, 1917 and 1918, but that, instead of doing so, its funds were diverted to the purchase of an American company yielding prodigious profits. It was then that the Riordons lost their heads, saw a great fortune within their grasp and plunged into the Kipawa adventure to their undoing. These things took place during the crisis of the war, when the little taxpayers of the country were being urged to do everything they could to finance the Government and to increase food production regardless of profits. In The Mail and Empire, of which Charles Riordon is still President, Carl Riordon Vice-President, and J. S. Douglas, another Director of the old Riordon Company, is General Manager, there appeared editorially on March 23, 1918, when the Germans had almost broken through the Western front, these words:

> Every Canadian with soul so dead as to go on in his pleasure-seeking and money-making as if there were no war ought to be branded as a caitiff. Every such Canadian ought to pray earnestly to be delivered from his own selfishness and to be touched by the spirit of loyalty and by the heroism of his country's defenders.

Charles Riordon and Carl Riordon, whose names appeared at the top of the column in which these aspirations had a place, may have prayed, but they did not pay. The Riordon Company's contribution to the winning of the war financially was a scrap of paper, an I.O.U., which, it is charged, has remained uncollected from that day to this.

Alleged Bluebeard Says He Plans to Produce One of the Missing Women

Versailles, Nov. 17.—A dramatic annduncement made in open court today by Henry Landru that he would produce before the court, one of the missing women the prosecution charged him with having murdered proved the climax of the trial of the so-called "bluebeard of Gambais."

The opinion was general in the court room that if Landru can make good his declaration, he most surely will be acquitted, but that if he fails to do so he will be guillotined.

IRISH SITUATION NOT NOW WORSE LONDON OPINION

Determination of Ulster Cabinet Has Not Had Serious Effect It Is Believed

London, Nov. 18.—The Irish peace situation is not deemed in authoritative circles to have been made worse by the Ulster cabinet's determination to adhere to its previously declared position.

The Daily Mail's political correspondent says he has ministerial authority in asserting that "the government now thinks they can see their ay through" and hopes that good results will ensue from the anticipated informal talk.

According to the Times, there is reason to believe that the Ulster communication reflects in its terms the message of Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier, to the demonstrators in Belfast on Wednesday, in which he declared the cabinet was "still striving to attain an honorable peace."

The Daily Chronicle which of all the London papers is probably the closest to the ministry, says editorially that it needless to be unduly alarmed at the Ulster reply.

"Premier Craig's refusal to accept an all-Ireland parliament as a basis for negotiations," says the newspaper, "is an exact parallel to the Sinn Fein's refusal to accept the principle of allegiance as a basis and there should be, in one case as in the other, no difficulty in getting the conference started untrammelled by conditions." The newspaper adds that the Ulster note expressed a willingness to enter the conference on these terms.

Hydro-Electric Power Commission Awards Contract

It is announced that the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario has just awarded a contract to the English Electric Company of Canada, Limited, for traction equipment for the new Hydro Radial cars at Windsor and Guelph.

This is the first large order for traction equipment placed by the Commission, and it is interesting to note the adoption of the English Electric Company's equipment, as this company has just commenced manufacturing in Canada. It is understood that this entire order will be manufactured at the St. Catherines plant of the English Electric Company. The equipment ordered is similar to that recently purchased from the English Electric Company by the Toronto Transportation Commission and now in use on their new cars.

URGES TREATY FOR PREVENTION OF FUTURE WARS

This is Suggestion of Elbert H. Gary At Meeting of Iron And Steel Institute

New York, Nov. 18.—Negotiation of the treaty which would prevent future wars was urged, in conjunction with an agreement to limit navies, by H. Elbert Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation, in an address today before the American Iron and Steel Institute, of which he is president. He also belittled the suggestion that armament limitation would reduce the manufacture of steel, saying the thought was unworthy of even passing notice. Business was improving, he said, but there must be further adjustments.

Mr. Gary briefly dismissed the suggestion that less steel would be manufactured as a result of armament limitation.

"In the first place," he said, "the amount of decreases, if any, which is doubtful, would be small and even though they might be large no sane and right-spirited person would consider monetary interest as of any importance when discussing national or international welfare."

Mr. Gary said it seemed to be generally conceded that business conditions throughout the country for the last six months had been steadily, if slowly, growing better. The volume of business in the steel industry had more than doubled in the last ninety days he said though profits had been little or nothing, during higher costs and low prices.

AGREEMENT REACHED FOR ESKIMO EASTERN PLAYOFF

After a mixup in the rugby draw which delayed the Eskimo decision to go East, the arrangements for the playoff were made to the satisfaction of West as well as East, Saturday Dec. 3, being the date set for the Eskimos to play the final game.

Eskimos Departure to the East Is Delayed

Deacon White Will Lead His Squad Eastward on Tuesday Morning, According to Present Arrangements—Negotiations for Playoff Brought to Close with Satisfaction to Both East and West

Just when the Eskimos rugby club had all their arrangements completed for the trip to Toronto leaving Saturday morning along comes a telegram from president of the C. R. U. stating that a new draw had been made which placed the Eskimos in opposition to Parkdale on Saturday November 26. The Eskimos had made their arrangements on the understanding that the playoff would be hurried up so that they could play the finals on Nov. 26. The local club had no intention of playing any semi-final. The original draw called for them to enter the final. Then the East offered to play a mid-week game so that the final could be brought on earlier. That was agreeable to the Eskimos But for the Esks to reach Toronto in time to play on Saturday 26 in the semi-final and when they had won that remain there another week to play the final—that was too much.

The Edmonton club sent an ultimatum to president Cole of the C.R.U. yesterday morning. It was to the effect that the Eskimos could not play in a semi-final but that they would be in Toronto ready to play a final on either of two dates set Nov. 26 of Dec. 3. The latter date, which is the one set in the original draw made by the C.R.U. meeting months ago was decided upon by the eastern officials so the Eskimos will play in Toronto December 3.

That point is definitely settled.

Leave on Tuesday

Under arrangements decided upon at present the Eskimos will leave the city on Tuesday with the expectations of arriving in Toronto in time to see the game between Parkdale and the winners of the Varsity-Argo contest today. Following that they will have a week in which to practice in Toronto. Those conditions should give them every opportunity they require.

Providing that the weather in Toronto is reasonably good the Eskimos will feel satisfied about entering the finals on Dec. 3. There is a good possibility that "Indian summer" will be in full swing there about that time in which case mild temperatures are almost certain.

In his telegram to Stuart Fraser, president of the Western Football association, notifying him that the Eskimos had been set down for December 3, president Cole states that he is glad that the Edmonton team is coming, thereby making the playoff a truly national affair.

The First Time

It is the first occasion on which a western team has been permitted to compete for the dominion title and fortunately it happens that upon this first occasion the west will be represented by what is easily the best machine ever developed in this section of the dominion.

Eastern papers are considerable interested in the Eskimo team and their prospective visit to the east. Demands for information about the personnel and record of the club have been numerous and it may be expected that when the Esks go into the field on Saturday, Dec. 3, they will see the largest crowd of spectators that has ever attended an athletic event in Canada.

Toronto officials stated last night that they had received Edmonton's decision and acceptance of Dec. 3 as the date, and that it was satisfactory to them.

ALL RECORDS ARE BROKEN BY COCHRANE

In Billiard Tourney Runs Out in Five Innings—High Run of 384

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—All records in 18.2 balk line billiards were broken here today in the world's championship games by Welker Cochrane, San Francisco, when he ran out in five innings and in the fourth made a high run of 384 in his match with George Sutton, Chicago. Sutton amassed 57 points. Cochrane's performance sets a new high run mark. In 1918, Willie Hoppe, world's champion, made a run of 307. At that time he was playing Cochrane in a handicap match 500 to 300 and the final score was 500 to 18. The run gave Hoppe an average of 81 1-3, exceeded only by an average of 100 made by Sutton ten years ago.

The highest run in balk line billiards previous to today was 265 made in a championship match by Cochrane two years ago. Last year Ora Morningstar, San Diego made a run of 272 in the preliminary competition of the national tournament of San Francisco.

The run of 384 and the consequent five innings gives Cochrane the high average of the present tournament—80. Hoppe ten years ago played a game out with an average of 88, and Sutton has a losing average of better than 59

Roger Conti, champion of France, defeated Edouard Horemans, champion of Europe, 400 to 105, in five innings in their match this afternoon. Conti played the most sensational game of the tournament to date and left the Belgian no chance after the first inning.

REGINA FAILS TO DECIDE TO ENTER LEAGUE

Promoters Feel That Without George Hay It Would Be Useless to Try

REGINA, Nov. 17—"It is off again, on again, gone again Finnigan," so far as Regina is concerned with the Western Canada Professional Hockey league. Just at a time when the local men behind the movement to start professional hockey in this city thought that things were all arranged, along comes a wire from Bob Pinder of Saskatoon, to the effect that George Hay must report to his team or not report at all. Direct communication with President E. L. Richardson did not change the prexy's idea that Hay should go to Saskatoon or not play at all, as he had indicated early in the day.

Later in the evening direct communication once more was instituted between Regina and Mr. Richardson and the net result was that Mr. Richardson promised to give his answer some time tomorrow.

The same arguments that prevailed yesterday with regard to George Hay were brought forth in the conversation over the phone. It was pointed out that without a man of his ability it was impossible for the local club to operate.

UNFAVORABLE WEATHER FOR ARGONAUT-VARSITY MATCH AT TORONTO THIS AFTERNOON

Mild Weather Following Recent Heavy Snows Has Left the Field in Slushy Condition—Varsity Would Prefer a Fast Field—Each Team Confident—Winner Meets Parkdale in Elimination to Play Eskimos

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—With unfavorable weather conditions forecasted, the first Canadian Rugby Union semi-final will be played tomorrow afternoon under the revised rules, between Argonauts, winners of the inter-provincial Union and 'Varsity, winners of the inter-union collegiate. All the reserved seats have been disposed of, which means that a record crowd will be on hand.

Recent mild weather has melted the snow, and the going will be slippery, adding to the uncertainty of the clash. Each club is confident of winning, although 'Varsity would have preferred a fast field.

H. H. McAuley, Montreal, and Ben Simpson, Hamilton, will be the officials, the former agreeing to act today.

TED LEWIS IS AFTER HEAVY HONORS OF G.B.

Has Climbed Through All Classes to Light-Heavy and Now Seeks Beckett

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Ted "Kid" Lewis, the British boxer who last night won the English light-heavyweight title by defeating Boy McCormick, has become the Georges Carpentier of the British Isles. Carpentier started out as a bantam and won all the championships of Europe and has progressed a bit further than Lewis. The latter, however, was featherweight champion of Europe before he made his first trip to the United States. He gained weight on this side, then won and lost the world welterweight championship in bouts with Britton. He returned to England and twice knocked out Johnny Bashan for welter honors of Great Britain.

Now that he has defeated McCormick, it is probable Lewis will challenge Joe Beckett for heavyweight honors.

SYRACUSE LEARNED NEW IDEAS FROM M'GILL; USE THEM TODAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 18 (By Canadian Press).—Football followers in these parts will have an opportunity to witness some features of Canadian rugby when the Syracuse and Dartmouth elevens meet at the Polo Grounds tomorrow.

Syracuse defeated McGill at Montreal two weeks ago at the American style 13 to 0, scoring all the points in the final period. Syracuse players were surprized at the deadly tackling and lateral passing of the Canadian game. So impressive was the play of their opponents that the Syracuse coaches immediately decided to adopt some of the methods of the Canadian students, which they thought particularly suitable for use in the American game. Against Colgate last Saturday, snow, sleet and mud prevented the use of these open plays, but given a dry field at the polo field, the tactics will be used against Dartmouth tomorrow.

McGill gets the credit on this side of the line for introducing college football in the United States. In 1875 the McGill team challenged Harvard to play a game of rugby football and from this contest, it is stated, originated the game now played by 500 colleges and 1,500 schools in all parts of the United States.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—George "K.O." Chaney of Baltimore, was disqualified for an alleged foul in the fifth round of his bout with Johnny Dundee tonight for the junior lightweight championship. The referee then awarded the bout to Dundee.

Dundee's seconds had complained in the earlier rounds that Chaney was hitting low. The referee warned the Baltimorean and when Chaney hit lightly below the belt in the fifth round, he stopped the contest. Dundee was awarded the Tex Rickard belt, emblematic of the junior lightweight title, a new class for 130 pound pugilists. The bout had been a lugging affair up to the fifth with Chaney landing the more punishing blows.

EDMONTON BEEF ADVANCES 25C THROUGH GRADES

(Miriam Green Ellis)

Cattle receipts at the Edmonton Yards are still comparatively light being 1003 cattle and 166 calves for the week. Prices are definitely stronger and Alberta cattle seem to be finding a market all over the continent and a few in Great Britain. A few exporters are being collected for shipment next week but none went out this week. A few top steers for the export trade brought $4.50, and this price would carry for good quality stock. Choice steers are quoted $4.00 to $4.50, and good steers half a dollar less. One steer weighing 1610 pounds sold for $4.25; three steers averaging 1090 sold for $4.00; one steer weighing 1060 sold for $4.00. three steers averaging 1095 sold at $3.75, one steer weighing 1460 sold for $3.75; twelve steers averaging 1085 sold for $350.

Fat cows and heifers are also in good demand and the prices are a little stronger right through the grades. Top cows would bring to $3.25 and best heifers $3.50. Ten cows averaging 1010 pounds sold at $3.10; six averaging 1100 sold at $3.00. Six heifers averaging 1060 sold at $3.25; four averaging 960 sold at $3.25.

All grades of beef are stronger, canner cows are selling 50c to $1.50; canner oxen and bulls 50c to $1.50.

There has been a good demand for feeders. Some are going to Lancaster Penn. for finishing, some get a railway journey to Coutts the border town of Alberta and from there are driven over into Montana for feeding. Some go to Toronto and Montreal, many of these doubtless being cut out for butcher purposes. Some beef is going to the west Coast slaughter houses. There is a strong demand for yearlings, yearlings of good color and some degree of quality showing. Farmers have got past the stage of taking dogs out to feed, and are asking for reds roans, and white faces, in fact any sort of definite beef breed. Stocker steers sell for $2.00 to $3.00; stocker heifers will bring $2.00 to $2.50. There is also quite a demand for stockers from the Calgary market.

Calves are still weak although the receipts are not as high as last year at this time. But the low price of beef naturally affects the price of calves. Receipts for the week were 166 and the price for the best of them is $3.50 to $4.00.

Sheep

Sheep receipts were 503 for the week and the prices are about steady, maybe a quarter higher on ewes. Twelve lambs weighing 95 pounds sold at $7.00.

Hogs

Hog receipts were 1378, and several car loads of these were shipped on to the Coast to the various packing houses there. The market there wants the light handy weight hog. The price is still slipping and on Friday was quoted at $8.25. Some that were brought in on contract brought a quarter of a dollar higher than this, but the indication of prices in the East would indicate lower prices still.

Grain Markets

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

Winnipeg, Nov. 18—The local wheat market held steady during the first hour of trading today and then turned sharply higher with an advance of four cents recorded. The strength was really in the November position, but the more deferred positions were following in line. Buying orders in November found that month decidedly tight, which forced up the prices. The buying was evidently for tonnage purposes. The market reacted very slightly from the high of the day and closed with a gain of 1 7-8 to 2 7-8c.

There was an excellent demand for the two top grades of cash wheat and premiums were fractionally higher. Offerings were more liberal. There was very little change in the coarse grain situation, with prices firmer today in sympathy with the advancing wheat market. Inspections totalled 1,285 cars, of which 1,182 were wheat.

Opening futures were as follows:

Wheat, November ⅛ to ⅜c higher at 107 to 107¼; December ⅜ to ⅝c higher at 102⅝ to 103 and May ⅜ to ⅝c higher at 107 to 107⅜.

Oats November ⅛c higher at 44⅞; December ⅛c higher at 41⅜ and May ⅛c higher at 43⅜.

Flax November ⅛c lower at 170; December unchanged at 164 and May ⅛c lower at 16¾.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, Nov. 18—Crop damage from Argentina led to a moderate advance in the wheat market today during the early dealings. Opening quotations, which ranged from ⅛c off to ⅛c gain with December 104¾ to 105 and May 109 to 109⅛, were followed by upturns all around.

Corn and oats although dull, showed firmness in line with wheat. After opening unchanged to ⅛c higher, May 50¼ to 50⅜; corn held near to the initial range.

Oats started at a shade off to ⅛ to ¼c up; May 37⅛ to 37¼, and then hardened a little.

Minneapolis Grain

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 18—Flour unchanged to 10 cents lower, 7.10 to 7.50 a barrel, shipments 64,885 barrels. Bran 14.00 to 15.00. Wheat cash No. 1 Northern 125½ to 127⅝, December 119⅝, May 117⅝. Corn No. 3 yellow 42½ to 43. Oats No. 3 white 29½ to 31. Flax No. 1, 175 to 184.

MERCHANTS ARE MORE CONFIDENT STATES REVIEW

Increased Orders Are Reported by Wholesalers in Many Different Lines

WINNIPEG, Nov. 18—(By Canadian Press)—Generally speaking business conditions throughout Canada are brighter, wholesale trade active and the feeling of confidence noticeable during the past two months is stronger, states the weekly trade report of the Canadian Creditmen's Trust association, issued today. The report however, states that there are districts such as southern Saskatchewan and southern Alberta, which are giving business men much concern.

Montreal and the province of Quebec find wholesalers in dry goods, hardware and groceries reporting increased orders; woollen trade only fair; boots and shoes slightly improved and seasonable clothing active. Fourteen district failures were reported during the week at Montreal.

In Toronto, wholesale trade is reported active, the improvement having worked up slowly but surely and being viewed with better confidence. Better retail trade with more seasonable weather. Collections are fair.

Winnipeg wholesalers report certain lines are very active and fair business is being done in boots and shoes, furniture dry goods, groceries and musical instruments. Retail trade also more active.

Regina and Saskatchewan reports state wholesalers find slight improvement over last week, only selling to first class accounts. Retail trade is slightly improved. Farmers are holding wheat and collections are poor.

Varying Influences Had Affected New York Mart in Trading on Friday

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—Rejection by the house of representatives of President Hardings surtax recommendations; Judge Gary's qualified review of industrial conditions and suspension of the United States industrial alcohol dividend were among the developments which prompted moderate selling in the stock market today.

The reaction was by no means general however, as evidenced by the strength of certain issues in the railway shipping, and metal divisions. Chesapeake and Ohio resumed dividends and retention of regular disbursements by several of the important merchandising companies was indicative of a more confident feeling in commercial circles.

Price movements were confusing among oils, steels, equipments and motors, those issues showing mixed gains and losses at the close. Specialties of the paper, leather, tobacco and the utility types, eased irregularly in the absence of recent pools support.

Sales amounted to 900,000 shares.

For the first time this week the money market evidenced a tighter tendency, call loans rising from their opening rate of 4½ per cent to 5½ per cent in the final hour. Foreign exchanges were irregular Most of the liberty and victory issues showed improvement after recent quotations.

Total sales par value $17,850,000.

New York, Nov. 18—Shorts were active in the stock market today, extending their committments on firmer money rates and uncertain industrial conditions. Sales approximated 900,000 shares.

Mary White, Social Editor of Globe, Toronto, one of the few women members of the Canadian Press Association.

In the mellow gracious atmosphere of the Eastern Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, the Canadian Women's Press Club, of 125 members, enjoyed a week of convention and entertainment that will open up a whole universe of new thoughts and pictures of life. These scribes, representatives of every part of the Dominion, from Victoria in the West to Halifax in the East, who play a large part in formulating the new forces that are destined to shape the life of Canada, were in convention recently in Montreal, Judge Murphy (Janey Canuck) of Edmonton, Alberta, National President, presiding.

The Conference, which is a triennial event, had not, owing to war conditions, met for seven years and has made possible a larger, richer, and more potent unity among the press workers of Canada. Following the Convention, a special train of six sleepers conveyed the party to Quebec City, as guests of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. There are great epochs in the life of individuals, unforgettable dates, and around that day spent in Quebec will linger the charm of a russet October day, redolent with the romance of the old city.

Quebec, age-steeped, time-softened, yet a bustling ocean port, was of especial interest to the Western writers—on the heights of the Citadel, with panorama of city, flame-bright hills, the ever-beautiful St. Lawrence hastening to the sea, the Lower Town, on the Plains of Abraham, at Ste. Anne de Beaupre, with its historical and religious interest and in all the glory of brilliant autumnal coloring, it was pleasant to re-create, in fancy, the picturesque world of the pioneers—the shadowy figures of the heroic past, to seek for threads that would unite that autumn day with all the days of glamour that are gone. The courtesies of the city were extended by Hon. Frank Carrel, Sir David Watson, of the local press; Colonel Wood, Mr. Everall, of the Quebec and Ste. Anne Electric Line.

An interesting feature was luncheon on the C. P. R. Liner "Empress of Britain," when Captain E. Griffiths was host. A sight-seeing tour was followed by a banquet at the Chateau Frontenac, which brought to end a "perfect day."

The officers of the Canadian Women's Press Club for the coming term are: Honorary President, Judge Murphy, of Edmonton; President, Miss Lucy Swanton Doyle, of Toronto.

Corresponding Secretary — Miss Charlotte Whitton, of Toronto.

Treasurer—Miss Mabel Burkholder, of Hamilton.

..Auditor—Mrs. A. A. Perry, of Winnipeg.

The Canadian Women's Press Club has a history of interest. In 1903, sixteen Canadian women journalists attended the St. Louis Exposition as guests of the C. P. R. Co., and on the train organized the Press Club, with Col. Geo. H. Ham as honorary president; the late Mrs. Kathleen Blake Cobman ("Kit") of Toronto, as president, and Mrs. Kate Simpson Hayes, of Winnipeg, as secretary. In 1906, a convention was held in Winnipeg. Mrs. Hayes, Mrs. R. C. Osborne, Miss Lediard, Mrs. C. P. Walker, and Miss E. Cora Hind had arrangements in charge and issued invitations to all Canadian women who were newspaper or magazine writers. Fifty writers attended the gathering, which was made a professional organization, working for the improvement of journalism and protection of women journalists. In accordance with the old riddle, "What is black and white and red all over?" the above colors were chosen as appropriate for a club of newspaper women. The emblem adopted was the maple leaf with a quill above, bearing the words: "Every Stroke Upwards." From these inaugural meetings, the Canadian Women's Press Club has developed into one of the outstanding societies of Canada with promise of large development.—C. G.

WHITEWASHING FARM BUILDINGS

Weather beaten farm buildings, even though comparatively new, are always somewhat of an eyesore. On the other hand, the painting of extensive buildings is an expensive process, although profitable in most cases if taken in time. A maintenance of appearance, without the expense of painting, is often secured by the use of whitewash, particularly in certain districts. Many are familiar with the whitewashed barns of the Eastern Provinces, which add greatly to the attractiveness of the landscape. Indoor whitewashing is, of course, always necessary The following recipes for whitewashing are claimed to give good results. Unslaked lime, two pecks; common salt, one peck; rice flour, three pounds, spanish hiting, 1-2 lb. glue of good quality, 1-2 lb. with 1 lb .water. The lime should be slaked in about 10 gallons of water Dissolve the salt previously and add to the water after the lime has been strained Soak the glue in water and dissolve on a water bath; add both together with whiting and five gallons of hot water Stir the whole well together. Protect this from dirt and let it stand for a few days. It should be applied hot.

Another recipe, much simpler than the one just mentioned, can be made from a bushel of lime and a peck of salt. The salt is not absolutly necessary but it gives a gloss to the whitewash and makes it stay on better. Slake half a barrel of lump lime with hot water. Strain, and add the salt, previously dissolved in warm water; also three pounds of ground rice, brought to a thin paste in boiling water. Then add a half pound of spanish whiting and a pound of glue dissolved in water. Mix and apply hot after it has stood for several days.

In some districts a cheap and very economical whitewash is made by simply diluting with water the refuse from a carbide lighting plant. This is not particularly suitable fo routside work as it will not stand weather as well as more orthodox whitewash. It is quite commonly used, however, in the neighborhood of villages lighted by carbide plants, where it is available in large quantities. It is claimed to have a distinct disinfectant value but to be sure on this point, for inside use, the addition of some colorless disinfectant, such as carbolic acid is advisable.

A STRONG STOUT CRATE FOR HOGS

Despite that a serviceable and satisfactory hog crate is easy to make and extremely durable, many farmers still expose their valuable breeding stock to injury in transit by shipping them in relatively fragile and hastily constructed crates The crate described herewith is valuable because an extra two inches of space is gained in the interior of the crate from the same amount of lumber, without in any respect weakening the box, by nailing the slats on the exterior instead of on the interior as is commonly done

The front of the crate is closed by providing a board which rests on end—in place of the slats which usually are nailed crosswise of the box. This permits of opening the box so that the hog can walk out readily, instead of being forced to back out as in the case of the general run of hog packing boxes. Furthermore, slats nailed crosswise are easily broken by mature, full-grown hogs.

In building a crate of the type under discussion, the sides should be made first and then the floor, top and ends should be built around them. In order to increase the strength of the crate, the floor should be laid crosswise. None but good stout material should be used. One 12-inch board or two eight-inch boards are adequate for each end. A block should be nailed to the floor one inch from each end to keep the end boards from slipping inwards In each instance, the crate should be built large enough to be roomy and comfortable for the individual hog to be shipped For animals weighing between 250 and 300 pounds, the crates should be made two feet wide, 4 feet 8 inches long and 2 feet 8 inches high

In building the sides of the crate, it is essential to use nails long enough so that one-fourth inch clinch may be made, the nails being bent crosswise of the grain of the wood. The nails in the end boards should be not clinched and their heads should be allowed to protrude sufficiently so that they can be easily removed with a claw hammer In this particular crate, the usual top cross board just above the animal's hind quarters is omitted because the shipping container is strong enough without this additional reinforcement.

HOME WAS DAMAGED

Fire partly destroyed the home of J. Hambly situated at 7557 112th avenue, Friday afternoon at 2.17. The quick response of the fire department saved the building from total destruction. The house and its contents were insured for $1,500.

Canadian Settlers Satisfied Twenty-Nine Palms Territory In Catifornia is Farm Land

Albertans Returned from the South State That Gross Untruths Have Been Circulated Regarding the District, Which at the Present Time Is Producing Crop

M. Lafond, ex-Alberta farmer, and now a settler in the Twenty Nine Palms district in California, is a visitor in the city, and in common with other French-Canadians who have purchased land in the district named is well satisfied with his bargain, and is intensely hostile against certain who have been instrumental in getting reports circulated which were carefully calculated to give the whole undertaking a bad name. Mr. Lafond went from Alberta with the intention of buying a quarter section but on seeing the land promptly purchased a half section. "I paid my own way there and back to satisfy myself" says the visitor, "and with the intention of doing the best for my family, I bought a farm, with which I am well satisfied. I had no other interests in going there, except for my own private business, which is nobody else's concern." Naturally, says Mr. Lafond, he was anxious to see others of his own people and relatives go there to settle also. He wrote and told these people exactly what the country was, and says, "My word is as good now as it was then."

Proof in Photos

The visitor brought back with him photographs of the country in question. The pictures show luxuriant vegetation in the vicinity of the springs, and are a criterion of what is possible when irrigation is applied. He also has a photo, dealing with a well, which is right in the centre of the property about which so much has been written. This well for the past thirty years has watered about 10,000 to 15,000 head of cattle owned by the various ranches before the settlers commenced to come in and is still producing water in the same capacity. It is only 167 feet deep.

Another Albertan returned from Twenty Nine Palms, is A. Levasseur, and this man corroborates what Mr. Lafond says. Mr. Levasseur owns 160 acres of land in the district and states that he is well satisfied also, while letters received from two other former residents of the province, F. A. Violette and F. Villeneuve state that this year they seeded a considerable area with a tractor and that a good crop resulted. Officials of the company state that the land is not sand—it is undoubtedly desert—but it is a silt composed of decomposed granite and will grow cerials without irrigation there being an annual rainfall of fifteen inches according to government statistics. They are of the opinion, however, that plenty of water can be obtained, as in similar nearby valleys the settlers irrigate from wells, the water being pumped to the service by engines and then distributed. In addition the hills surrounding the valleys have been utilized for water storage; the ravines have been closed up in some places and natural reservoirs thus formed.

Fruit Trees Grow

At Coyote Hole and Warne's Wells, which are located on the edge of the property, there are numerous settlers growing grain, while blossoming fruit trees show that the region is not arid, once water is procured. Even away from the hills, Mr. Violette broke 30 acres in the centre of the valley, where the land was sold to the Alberta settlers, and on this he raised good crops of oats and barley. These were seeded in March and at the end of May were a foot high and looking well.

Statements have been circulated saying that the land which the Alberta men purchased was located in the Mojave Desert, which is known to be worthless. As a matter of fact the Twenty Nine Palms area is located over one hundred miles from the Mojave. The Mojave is a flat desert devoid of any natural features, while the Twenty Nine Palms valley is surrounded by streams and hills and is within 18 miles of the Coachilla valley where fruit lands have been brought to the highest state of cultivation.

On behalf of one of the buyers of land in the Twenty Nine Palms district, who was dissatisfied with his purchase, a meeting was called by his solicitor at the board of trade rooms on Friday, which was attended by a number of men interested in the project. This meeting was called for the purpose of the purchasers clubbing together to engage a reliable engineer—acquainted with irrigation projects in southern California to visit the valley and tender a report on the whole matter.

It was decided by the meeting, however, not to do this as there are two Albertans on the ground at the present time, and nothing further will be done until these men are heard from.

The people of this generation may not live as long as people did formerly, but they can go farther, see and hear more in a week than their forefathers could in a year.

If women's skirts are tto be longer we expect to see more men looking up.

MANITOBA JUDGE ELEVATED: Mr. Justice Metcalf, who has been elevated from the Manitoba Court of King's Bench to the Manitoba court of appeals. He is the judge who sentenced the Winnipeg strike leaders.

PROVINCE DOES ROAD WORK IN SOUTH ALBERTA

Thirteen Thousand Dollars Has Been Spent There—Building in Calgary

Thirteen thousand dollars has already been spent in road work in the Southern part of the province, work that was forced ahead by the minister of public works in order to provide relief for the farmers in the drouth area. In Calgary there is considerable building going on including a large number of small houses and then there is also the New Technical Building and Normal School with which are also connected the power plant and the work shops.

Painting Walls

The plain painted wall is superseding the ornately papered room, and its practicability is evident. Many paints can be washed, and the keeping of light paint clean and fresh looking is only a matter of soap and water. It is a truly economical state of affairs when a whole room can be freshened and brightened by the housewife herself, by the simple process of washing.

A room which has plnty of sunlight can stand a darker wall than one of northern exposure. A too light wall in a sunny room will be glaring, no matter how well the floor and woodwork are finished. Colors of neutral browns, gray, green or even blue without a lustre are the most appropriate for a sunny room. A small sunny room will look larger if the walls are of neutral gray and painted with a rather flat finish. On the other hand, halls, dark passages, and rooms which get little or no sunlight can best make use of what light they receive by reflecting it in light colors—white, buff or salmon, light tans, or even a warm pink-gray with a high lustre.

Strained Muscles, Sprains, Can Be Treated Quickly

In minor sprains, the muscle is strained a little, and all that is needed is a vigorous rubbing with Nerviline. This draws the extra blood away, and permits the muscle to return to its normal condition. The supremacy Nerviline enjoys is owing to its penetrating power, it strikes deeply, that is why it removes deep-seated pains, and fixes up folks that have Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuralgia and Sciatica. There is about five times the pain-destroying power in Nerviline as you find in the average liniment. Sold everywhere, 35c per bottle.

Every One Has a Kind Word to Say of The Page (Internal) Pile Treatment

Two Tablets and Back to Work.

"I have been a sufferer from [illegible] of the worst form for the past six years. I had consulted with the best doctors, but to no avail. I had been unable to work for the two weeks previous to the time I sent for your treatment, and suffered terribly, not being able to find a position I could rest in.

The day I received the medicine I took two pile tablets after supper and one pill before I retired. The next day I worked and have continued to work ever since. I feel like a new man.

I have recommended your treatment to a friend of mine who is [illegible] with itching piles as I know it will knock 'em out.

Thanking you kindly for the prompt attention given my order, I am, yours for success."

IRA M. SACORA.

Aged [illegible]—Suffered for Years.

"I want you to know what your treatment has done for me. I had suffered with piles for many years and used suppositories and all kinds of treatments, but never got relief until I tried yours. Am now completely cured. Although I am [illegible] years old and the oldest active blacksmith in Michigan, I feel years younger since the piles left me. I will surely recommend it to all I know who suffer this way. You can use my letter any way you wish and I hope it will lead others to try this wonderful remedy."

Yours truly,

Told There Was No "Home Cure"

"Replying to your recent inquiry I am glad to be able to state that the two large-size packages of Treatment I ordered for my son cured him sound and well.

I have tried several remedies but none seemed to have any effect. I was told by some that there was no such thing as a Home Cure for piles. Then by chance I picked up a piece of scrap paper and saw your advertisement. I asked for a free sample got it and after I had seen what it had done, I ordered [illegible] treatment and it almost [illegible] my son. Then I ordered another and I say I can be as [illegible] that I picked up that scrap of paper and answered your advertisement. I can't say enough for the E. R. Page Pile Remedy. I have recommended it to my friends here and sent some of your pamphlets to friends in other states.

Now you may use this letter or any part of it as you may see fit, to introduce your wonderful remedy. With best wishes for your success, I remain,"

Yours very truly,

"Can Not Be Praised Too Much."

"After suffering years with Piles I feel now as if I had never had them. Your remedy is certainly a success and cannot be praised too much. Had it not been for running across your ad in the World Almanac, I suppose I would be still bothered with this awful disease.

I want to thank you for your kindness, and if I ever have an opportunity of recommending it I will do so."

Sincerely yours,

Took the Page Treatment 18 Years Ago.

One of the most grateful letters ever received in our office is dated from Gate City, Virginia, and is signed by Mr. T. H. Quillin.

Mr. Quillin writes that he used our method for treating piles 18 years ago. He states that he was cured at that time and has never had any return of his trouble. He orders a treatment for his son.

Mr. E. R. Page.

"You will have to excuse me for not answering your letter before but I wanted to convince myself of the merit of your treatment before replying.

Now in regards to the treatment I cannot praise it too highly.

After 7 months of continual pain I was surprised how quickly your treatment worked.

I tried several different kinds of treatments and I found them all wanting.

I was on the verge of going to a doctor for an operation when I saw your advertisement.

It appealed to me because to cure piles you have to know what causes them.

It is now 6 months since I have taken your treatment and I have not had any trouble since.

I personally recommend this treatment to all pile sufferers.

HARRY SCHLECHTER.

Doctors Recommended An Operation.

"I was a sufferer from piles. Two doctors had said there was nothing that would do me any good but an operation. First I tried a sample of your Pile Treatment and was greatly relieved. Then I ordered a regular Treatment and now I feel that I am cured. I advise all people who suffer with piles to take the Page Treatment."

Sincerely yours,
J. W. SHORES.

ÆSOP'S FABLES TRANSLATED TO SCREEN WORLD

Modernized Version of Old Stories to Be Big Weekly Feature at the Orpheum

Aesop's Fables have been translated into all the languages of the world, but little is known of the author of them.

Indeed, it may be that such a man never lived! The meagre history written about him is purely legendary.

He is said to have been born in Phrygia, about 620 B.C. He was a slave, physically deformed but with a super mind. He gained his freedom by his ready wit and travelled through Asia Minor and Egypt.

He attached himself to the court of Croesus, King of Lyria.

Croesus sent him as ambassador to Delphi. Aesop offended the people with his pointed remarks. They hurled him from a rock into the sea. He died about 564 B.C.

All of this, of course, is legendary. Aesop pointed out fallacies and foibles of the human mind that are applicable to situations of the Twentieth century.

And even now he is accused of stealing the thunder of other writers. That, too, is practiced today, as it was 2,600 years ago.

Human nature was about the same 2,600 years ago as it is today. Only the methods of expressing it have changed.

Aesop laboriously wrote out his fables on rolls of parchment. Today they are told by the fastest medium of expression ever known to man—the motion picture.

But they point to the same moral. Take, for instance, "The Goose That Laid the Golden Egg." It is the first of the Aesop Fables to be drawn for Pathe by Paul Terry cartoonist.

Terry sketches out the tale as told by Aesop. He injects a modern touch or two.

She had ordered eight diamonds, 25 dresses from Paris and a mess of other non-essentials. She demanded more money.

Nature has so arranged affairs that geese lay only one egg a day, and not every day at that.

Desire to please his wife and avarice drove the man to kill the goose for immediate income. And Aesop pointed out, the goose's innards were just like those of any other goose.

Then Terry points to the modern moral. He depicts Common People tied to the ground.

Capital wants to continue in the luxury of large profits. He thus infers that Capital is like the woman in the fable who wanted the diamonds and fine dresses and the brick of ice cream simply by asking the goose to do more than its share.

Labor is represented as the man cutting off the head of Common People with the demand for high wages.

At any rate, Common People is the Goose—and gets it in the neck.

Another picturized fable is "The Rooster and the Eagle."

The rooster knocked the stuffing out of a mutt of a duck. Then he flew to the highest steeple and announced that he could lick anybody in the world.

An eagle swooped down and knocked the rooster from his perch. Perhaps Wilhelm didn't believe in fables when he made a similar announcement a few years ago.

Terry draws the parallel of Woman as the Eagle doing away with the vainglorious and corrupt politician who would rule the destinies of the world.

Joseph E. Howard, Accompanied by Ethlyn Clark, Bring Fresh Treat

The noted song composer and revue producer, Joseph E. Howard, accompanied by Miss Ethlyn Clark, the prima donna, will top the program at the Orpheum theatre commencing with matinee Monday next. In vaudeville Joe Howard and Miss Clark have appeared by themselves and as pioneers in the revue craze. He has always kept his fingers on the public's pulse and in this way has managed to get a step or two ahead of most players. When the big revue was the thing, Mr. Howard and Miss Clark presented themselves in a big revue and [illegible] timate is again the thing, they are offering an intimate production. This is described as a hodgepodge of musical comedy, reviving several of Mr. Howard's old songs and introducing several of his new ones. It gives Miss Clark an opportunity for her bounteous good looks, her smiles and her voice. There is an inter-change of banter, that is real wit and humor and there is Jack King at the piano.

Tim and Kitty O'Meare with the assistance of Ross Wright, will present "Memories of a Dance." These memories will include a variety of modern dances, closing with a whirlwind number that is said to be positively the fastest thing in speed. Both these performers were introduced to the public by Miss Bessie Clayton and were selected as features in one of Miss Clayton's dance productions.

After five successive years spent in Great Britain, Claude Goldon, the premier card expert, will make his first appearance in Edmonton. He has been all over the world and amuzed people of every climo with his cards and does every conceivable and some unconceivable things with them. Many of his stunts are just tricks, but mathematics play an important part in his performance. He is astonishing and undoubtedly one of the best card manipulators.

Al and Fanny Stedman will offer "Pianocapers". Al and Fanny Stedman, as everybody who goes to vaudeville knows, present a unique blending of fun and music, aptly described by a dramatic reviewer as a humorous, interesting, unique and intensly human act, and the describe it all with the one word "Pianocapers" The Stedman's are sure-fire vaudevillians. They have been borrowed on many occasions for musical comedy and have done well in such pieces as "The Red Mill," "Hanky Panky" and the George M. Cohan revue, but their stronghold is the two-a day. Mr. Stedman is composer, a song writer, a pianist and a comedian. Miss Stedman is attractive and clever and contributes her full 50 per cent. to the success of the act.

Frank and Milt Britton will "say it with music" on xylophones. Frank and Milton are two popular masters of this instrument. They will offer a number of syncopated selections in the rendering of which they are considered quite unapproachable. They are great favorites along the circuit and should charm their audiences next week.

Margaret Taylor will offer a number of carefully selected songs from her repertoie. As a performer Miss Taylor has many delightful qualities. She has appearance, personality, winsomeness and natural ability of very high order.

Jack Kennedy and company will offer "A Golf Proposal" a comedy of the links, one of the most successful of the golf sketches written around the universally popular game. At the eighteenth hole, close to the pavilion, two comedy love affairs are pulled off, one between an elderly couple and the other by a couple of youngsters. Mr. Kennedy is an excellent comedian and his supporting company is carefully chosen. The result is a very amusing entertainment.

Topics of the Day, British-Canadian News Weekly and Aesop's Fables will be the film features.

MAY M'AVOY SCORES AGAIN IN NEW ROLE

When Realart determined to celebrate their second anniverary with a special production they combed the industry for someone to fittingly occupy the star part in the story which was written by Hector Turnbull. It was not mere chance that Miss McAvoy was chosen to play the role of the petite French maid, Jeanne Millette, in "A Private Scandal," coming Thursday to the Regent theatre.

Miss McAvoy had already made a reputation for herself with her marvellous interpretation of Grizel in "Sentimental Tommy" and her fine characterizations in "The Devil's Garden," "Truth About Husbands," "Forbidden Valley" and other pictures.

In "A Private Scandal," Miss McAvoy is called upon to portray a very difficult role that of an innocent girl upon whom suspicion rests, and who keeps silent through loyalty to the guilty woman who has been her friend and benefactress. Miss McAvoy handles this with consummate art.

MORAL FIBRE FINE DRAMA AT METROPOLITAN

Corinne Griffith as Woman Who Demanded an Eye for an Eye

"Moral Fibre" in which Corinne Griffith appears and which will be the attraction at the Metropolitan theatre the last half of next week is an adaption of a story by Harrison Goadby William B. Courtney wrote the scenario and the production was filmed under the direction of Webster Campbell.

The excellent cast includes Catherine Calvert, Harry C Browne who plays opposite Miss Griffith; William J. Parks and Alice Concord.

Miss Griffith, who is steadily adding to her popularity by the various roles she portrays, ventures into a new field in "Moral Fibre" Throughout the early scenes she appears as a girl of fifteen, knee skirted and sunbonneted and with all the abandon of youth.

Later, a lapse of five years shows her as a well poised young woman, making her way alone in the world and intent on one purpose—the taking of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, from a married woman who, in the spirit of fun, flirted with the young girl's brother and brought misfortune upon him.

A pretty little love story develops during the action of the play, which serves to teach the heroine that vengeance is not hers to take.

The play is full of action throughout and calls for elaborate sets both interior and exterior and a variety of gowns.

"EAST LYNNE" AT MONARCH NEXT MONDAY

Hugo Ballin's screen revival of "East Lynne," which will be seen here at the Monarch commencing next Monday, tempts theatregoers to interrogate stage historians and to browse through old playbills and records. For Mrs. Henry Wood's melodrama has too long been a literary and theatrical tradition not to have had an interesting history.

A play in which ladies have revealed lachrymally not for years, but for generations, not only in the language of the original, but in virtually every tongue—such a creation must necessarily have enlisted the talents of many artists and must at the same time have been witnessed under unusual circumstances.

Mabel Ballin, wife of the mural painter now lending his talents to the film plays the heorine whose problems while old are forever new. The part is associated with the memory of a dozen famous actresses, whose achievements are part of the history of the stage of America. The play was first performed in London in 1862, and in New York a year later. Matilda Heron, Lucille Western, Ada Gray, Clara Morris, Adelaide Cushman and Nance O'Neil are only a few of the favorite actresses of the last generation who were closely identified with "East Lynne."

THE ROYAL PIERROTS TO MAKE THEIR LAST APPEARANCE TODAY

The Royal Pierrots who have made such a wonderful impression upon Edmonton theatre goers, will make their last appearance to-day, at 2.30 and 8.15.

Their program consists of singing, dancing, and lots of laughter for young and old, making an enjoyable entertainment of two hours and a half of fun, vivacity and novelty; appreciated by the amusement loving public the world over, and no more fitting attraction could be found for any season.

One of the most striking attributes connected with this entertainment is the clearness of diction of each member of the company. Speech at its best, is a very high social attainment. It is seldom attained by provincials but it is really acquired by gracious cosmopolitans [illegible] other nation's customs and characteristics upon the minds of the observer and the tongue is the natural outlet [illegible] the brain. More and more throughout this country the demand for spoken English is being voiced and the lack of it is everywhere decried.

HUMAN INTEREST IS A FEATURE OF RIALTO PICTURE

The Rialto theatre has gone and done it again, and is bringing to Edmonton what is claimed to be one of the biggest pictures ever produced "The Honor System." The screening will start December [illegible] and the showing will be for three days.

When William Fox set out to produce "The Honor System," a story of prison life which is melodrama pure and simple, his object was [illegible] to attempt the ultimate of the cinema but to give to the motion picture public a great and most gripping human drama.

The story is laid in the mining town of Howling Dog, in Arizona, near the Mexican border. In taking these scenes, R. A. Walsh proved himself a director genius. He has pictured the border foray in all its thrilling interest. The spectator can see the horde of Villa swooping down on Howling Dog, the hasty organization of the citizens for defense, the daring ride of the hero for assistance, the wild dash of cavalry to the rescue and the utter rout of the bandits.

FAIRBANKS AT THE ALLEN ON MONDAY NEXT

"The Three Musketeers" Will Be Popular Attraction All Next Week.

Sixteen duels, a man holding up a broken bridge while three riders cross it, the stealing of a queen's jewels, a desparate fight with a conscienceless woman for their recovery, the smashing of one of the greatest intrigues of history—these are but a few of the dramatic incidents in Douglas Fairbanks' sixth United Artists picture "The Three Musketeers," scheduled for a week's run at the Allen beginning next Monday.

History retold in celluloid! That's what is claimed for this feature by the management of the Allen. Based on the marvelous adventures and escapades of the dashing D'Artagnan and three of King Louis XIII's Musketeers, this photoplay unfolds the history of France in the early Seventeenth Century when that monarchy was dominated by the designing and crafty Cardinal Richelieu, a soldier by training but a statesman and churchman only by virtue of intrigues he devised.

No more vivid and picturesque tale has ever been presented on the screen than this according to Manager Buchanan. From a photographic standpoint it is a work of art, and costumes and sets, are marvelous. It is believed that this photoplay will go down in film history as one of the classic productions.

Fairbanks' interpretation of the dashing and impulsive D'Artagnan will present him to his admirers in a new light, and the work of the all-star cast that supports him will insure satisfaction to all photoplay goers.

BUCK JONES IN WESTERN DRAMA AT MONARCH

Buck Jones, the William Fox cowboy star, is coming to the Monarch theatre next Thursday in "Straight from the Shoulder." While Buck plays the part of a peacemaker or madiator in this story, he is compelled to fight—and fight hard—for the end he has set out to attain. Judging by past performances Buck will give an account of himself that will be thrilling. No doubt we will see more of his masterly horsemanship—some stunts on horseback that stir the blood.

COLD MILLION WAS COST OF DOUG.'S DRAMA

"The Three Musketeers" Will Be Shown at Allen Starting Monday

For the first time since he became a screen actor, Douglas Fairbanks spent a cold million dollars in order to make "The Three Musketeers," showing at the Allen all next week at popular prices, which has proven to be the film sensation of the picture world, and which was adapted by Edward Knoblock from Alexander Dumas' famous novel, and directed by Fred Niblo.

Never before in the history of the motion picture industry was a photoplay produced on so lavish a scale as was this forthcoming Fairbanks offering. Nearly a hundred thousand dollars was spent on costumes alone, and more than half that amount was expended in the building of exterior sets, not counting the ship and the pier which cost a small fortune besides.

The payroll for the actors and players was more than three times as heavy for this picture as it was on any previous Fairbanks film, owing to the fact that it was the aim of the star-producer to get the best talent available regardless of cost.

More women play with Doug in important roles in "The Three Musketeers" than ever before appeared with him in any feature. Marguerite De La Motte, Mary MacLaren and Barbara La Marr, all stars in their own right, who are among the highest paid photoplayers on the screen, take the leading parts.

All told there are one hundred and sixteen persons in the cast not counting the extras, and the weekly payroll for "The Three Musketeers" reached the staggering figure of over $50,000 a week.

Women of Paris are wearing snail shells as ornaments. They may eat the snails and use their shells for ornaments, but the Parisians never will stand for the snail's pace. In Paris you have got to be fast—so they say.

NEW LAURELS FOR CLARA K. YOUNG IN RIALTO PICTURE

Every new effort of that superb screen actress, Clara Kimball Young, brings new laurels to her mounting fame. Another revelation of the many sided talent of this brilliant star is disclosed in what must be conceded to be the greatest photo-dramatic achievement in her long and successful career.

This famous masterpiece of Englands' greatest playwright, deals with the most critical period of married life, which is fittingly compared to the stormy centre of the English channel—Mid-Channel,—which all voyagers must pass and which is beset with treacherous currents that are as fatal as they are unsuspected and unseen.

When Ethel Barrymore scored in the role of the leading lady, Zoe Blundell, during the run on Broadway only a few fortunates could share the joy that this drama imparts and benefit by the stirring message it holds in store for every human being. Now that this thrilling drama of modern marriage comes to the screen its effect will be universal. The temptations of the beautiful Zoe Blundell, married to a man whose only use for his mate is as a tool for the entertainment of his friends, and a stepping stone to his climb on the ladder of world's success, are such as to awaken heartfelt sympathy.

If only Mr. Husband and Mrs. Wife would meet each other half way, the danger would be over and they would sail on the waters of married life as cheerfully as when they first stepped on the gangplank.

TEMPLE PLAYERS TO PRESENT "PALS FIRST"

A Play of Gripping Interest to Be Shown All Next Week at the Temple Theatre

"Pals First." Here is a play of gripping interest, which will be presented all next week by the Temple players, the peoples favorite company. In "Pals First" the story deals with a man of wealth, who becomes involved in a crime. He has in consequence to leave home. While travelling disguised as a tramp, he picks up a real hobo, takes him with him and makes a man of him. The tramp is unable to understand all this but becomes firmly attached to his benefactor, and this situation is what gives the play its name. "Pals First" is one of the latest releases for stock purposes. It is out of the run of ordinary plays and is such that the intense interest in all is sustained till the last drop of the curtain. While it deals with two society crooks, it has nothing that is sordid or unpleasant. On the other hand it abounds in intense and exciting situations with a plentiful supply of [illegible] comedy. Following the many previous successes of the Temple Players, [illegible] week's offering should prove a great success, as the patrons of the Temple are assured at all times of Temple quality. To miss "Pals First" would be to miss one of the best plays of the season.

RIALTO USHERS IN WINTER BY TIMELY FILM

"The Rider of The King Log" Is Picture of Maine Timber Area

If ever there was a picture that is timely to Edmonton it is "The Rider of the King Log," which will be shown at the Rialto theatre the first three days of next week. It is a winter story, and Edmonton is having the start of its winter right now.

"The Rider of the King Log," portrays what is essentially a winter atmosphere, taken in the State of Maine, when that part of the hemisphere was covered with snow and the folk there looked only for a big timber cut and an early spring to take it out.

"The Rider of the King Log" is in that atmosphere, but he had an idea, and the idea is worked out in the picture the Rialto is presenting. The hero of this story makes his point and attains the object of his life when his girl triumphs. He was dead but he left a spirit behind for another to pick up. Her success and her fight to bring to fruition the aims of the parent round out a screen story wh[illegible] even the most hardened of [illegible] followers cannot but admit is [illegible] classic on the silver sheet.

The eternal clash between the mountaineers of Kentucky and the inhabitants of the valley, is threshed out again in the Charles Maigne production of "The Kentuckians", which will be at the Rialto theatre the last half of next week. Monte Blue is featured in the stellar role.

The film was made from the popular novel by John Fox, Jr., and it retains the fine characterizations the simple mountain atmosphere the dramatic situations that abound in the book one which was one of the best sellers of the last decade.

Monte Blue is an heroic figure as Bonne Stallard the backbone of his clan and the only man who could quell fueds between the different families. Stallard is sent to the Kentucky legislature, and early there he has a clash with Randolph Marshall of the Blue Grass country, who has his own ideas about the way to rule the mountaineers. In the end, however, Boone convinces Marshall that he can handle his own people, and that they can fight their own problems, thus making for a union of these two elements of Kentucky civilization in common accord.

Mr. Blue's leading woman is Diana Allan. Others in the cast include Frank Joiner, Wilfred Lytell and John Miltern. For a Kentucky subject this play is one wholly out of the ordinary, and is described by reviewers in the trade magazines as "mighty good entertainment."

TALENT OF EUROPE HAS BEEN SECURED FOR RIALTO PATRONS

Despite the fact that Hungary had a difference with Britain and the other allies in the world war, it cannot be denied that there were those of Hungary's subjects who had dramatic talent. Franz Molnar was one, and a work of his has been scenarioized and will be on the screen at the Rialto theatre for three days starting November 28.

"A Trip to Paradise" is the title, but the locale has been changed by the versionist, Benjamin F. Glazer, to Coney Island, and generally the story is made to suit this side of the Atlantic.

It is a picture that will repay the seer, one not easily forgotten, for work of this kind on the screen comes but once in a long time. It is "different" both in the splendid acting, the remarkable plot, and the scenic investiture which is the result of Arthur Martenilli's skilful photography and Julian Garnsey's effective directing.

Virginia Valli, who appears as Nora O'Brien, the young girl who loses her heart to the Coney Island roughneck, plays with delicacy of feeling and wistful charm that make an unforgettable impression. She is a personable young woman Miss Valli, and has a mastery of emotional effect that lands her among the leading actresses of the screen. In "A Trip to Paradise" she is a star in everything but having her name in big letters.

A trading post typical of those found in the Hudson Bay settlement or in British Columbia was built by Vitagraph for the Earle Williams production, "Bring Him In." It is called the trading post "Fort Resolution" and is the exact duplicate of one in northern Alberta. The laws of the colony are posted on the outside. The building itself is of rough hewn timber a foot wide and an inch thick.

The inside of this trading post was stocked with pelts of wildcats, gray fox and many others, Indian Navajo blankets, headdresses of feathers in which are some rare eagle plumes, tin cups, kettles, flour and the like. The blankets, moccasins and cooking utensils were exchanged with the Indians for pelts, the keeper of the post usually taking advantage of the Indian and giving him about quarter what the pelt was worth.

The story of "Bring Him In" is from the pen of H. H. Van Loan and deals with the Canadian northwest mounted police. Earle Williams has the role of Dr. Hood, a surgeon who is being hunted by Sergeant McKenna of the Royal mounted police. The two, without knowing the identity of the other, camp together several months and during this period some of the most dramatic sequences occur. A love story is introduced in which the daughter of the trading post keeper plays an important part. This role is assumed by Fritzi Ridgeway, who is considered one of the best equine experts in the motion picture world. She has ample opportunity to show her skill in this line during the production

Rapid Firing Guns on Speedy Launches to Chase Smugglers

Seattle, Nov. 17.—Sealing launches capable of travelling 30 miles an hour and armed with one pound rapid firing guns, will be recommended to combat liquor smugglers from British Columbia. Announcing that they have decided to recommend the immediate equipment of such boats, prohibition enforcement authorities and customs officials say that ordinary coast guard vessels cannot compete with the smugglers for speed. Crews of the fast boats will be instructed to top or sink any suspected craft in the sound.

At her best in strong characterisations and vivid contrasts in which she can cut loose and act, Pauline Frederick has just such a role in "The Sting of the Lash," her current starring vehicle released by R. She tolerates all his abuse all his neglect until he strikes his little sister. This, however, arouses the fury in the worn heart of his wife and she plies the lash upon him till big broad welts appear on his back. The lashing scene is one of the most gripping episodes ever depicted [illegible] screen and is notable because [illegible] becomes maudlin or gruesome despite the lengths to which the wife goes in her mad effort to bring her husband to his senses.

YOUNG GIRLS MADE VAIN BY HIGH HEELS

"High Heels" Is an Appealing Photoplay of the Awakening of a Girl's Soul

High heels.

The sign of sophistication.

It gives her a sort of inward satisfaction—a security of superioritty over all she surveys.

It's bad enough when grown women take this attitude but when eighteen-year-old flappers decide that there is nothing left for them to learn—then something is bound to happen.

And something usually does happen.

Usually the little flippant flapper has a hard come down off her high heels

Sometimes they are wise enougt to see the error of their ultra-aristocratic ways.

But not so Christine Trevor

She was the snobbiest snob that ever tilted a perfectly formed snobbish nose. Nothing was good enough for her—no one was rich enough—she was ashamed of her father and brothers.

High heels were ruling the roost.

Then something happened—the fortune that was a bubble, burst; and in the financial crash down went John Trevor, head of thehouse.

THANKSGIVING CHEER

By [illegible]

"I think it's an awfully good idea," said Grace Holden. "I'm just as excited as I can be!"

"So am I!" exclaimed her sister, Patty. "It makes the day seem so different."

Mrs. Holden smiled approvingly at her two daughters as they fluttered over a large hamper which they were filling with good things. The idea had been Grace's. Since their big brother, Robert, and their father could not be home for Thanksgiving, the girls decided to share their treat with some less fortunate than themselves. There was Mrs. Malvina Higgins, who washed for them and had so many children. Grace was sure that half a turkey, pies and fixing ought to be very much appreciated there.

"Can I go too," asked little Eugene, as the girls loaded the hamper on their pony-cart.

"Oh, you don't want to go," said Patty, "we'll be back soon anyhow and you'd only get tired."

"Besides who would there be to have thanksgiving with mother?" put in Grace.

Mrs. Higgins lived near the railway and it took half an hour to reach her house. When they got there, it looked as if everybody was away. Patty got down and went around to the back, while Grace held the reins. No, the family wasn't away. She could hear the gay laughter from the kitchen, and peering in the window she saw the family—Mrs. Higgins, and all her little Higginses—siting around the kitchen table which groaned with good things. Patty quietly went away.

"Grace," she said, "They won't need any of our 'cheer'. Let's find somebody else."

"Who, for instance?" inquired Grace, feeling, and looking disappointed.

"There's old Miss Baker, who sews for Mother sometimes," suggested Patty. "Maybe she'd like company and a feast for Thanksgiving."

A good idea. Miss Baker looked very lonesome. The girl's hearts filled with every good impulse as they trotted their little steed to Miss Baker's street. She lived in one room in a cheap boarding-house.

"There it is!" said Patty, pointing out the dingy house. "You'd better hold Pinto while I go and see if she's in because that big car in front of the door might scare him."

Gaily she darted across the street, full of her good intentions, and just as she reached the car a familiar voice called: "Oh, there goes one of the little Holden girls!"

Patty looked up and there in the big car sat Miss Baker with a pretty little girl hugging her arm.

"Did you want to see me, Patty?" she inquired, leaning out.

"Oh, ahem!" replied Patty. "You were just going out, weren't you?"

"This is Margaret, my niece's little daughter, who has come to take me home to spend the day," replied Miss Baker.

"How do you do," Margaret said, politely. "Auntie says you are a very nice little girl."

"Thank you," replied Patty, trying to keep the disappointment out of her voice. "I hope you have a good time, Miss Baker."

"Won't you come too?" asked Miss Baker. "But I suppose you want to spend Thanksgiving with your own folks."

Patty at last got away and she was pretty mad. "It's just awful!" she cried. "Now what shall we do?"

"I saw right off what was going on," replied her sister, "so I put on my thinking cap. How about Willie and Tillie Dougherty? They have no motherand I'm sure they need Thanksgiving cheer."

Patty thought Willie and Tillie were a very good idea, so Pinto's head was turned around again and they raced off to the other end of town and drew up before a neglected frame house.

Grace had Patty hold the reins this time, while she went to knock. Nobody answered so Grace turned to her sister.

"I think they're both out," she said "but they have no regular hours for their meals and I have an idea. Let's steal in and spread our cheer on the table and then go away or else hide in the house. That would be a fine surprise, don't you think so?"

Patty thought it would and as they were very intimate with the Dougherty children, they felt it would be all right to open the unlocked front door and spread the feast without invitation or permission. But they were scarcely inside when they heard a low, deep, regular sound. They peeped into the living room and there in the morris chair sat Willie and Tillie's father fast asleep with his feet on the table and a newspaper on his face. "Let's go!" whispered Patty; but just then he said, "whoof!" and out from behind the newspaper popped his big red face.

"Well, well!" he shouted in his loud hearty tones. "Did you come to see the kids? Well they went over to play next door. But don't you go. Just wait till I call them."

"We—we thank you," said Grace, "but we ought to be going"

"Oh no!" shouted Mr. Dougherty getting to his feet. "Come with me and I'll show you something that'll make you want to stay."

They followed him to the kitchen and there if they didn't find Mrs. Heather and her daughter the best cooks in town fixing turkey and all sorts of goodies for the motherless Doughertiesl The girls slunk away feeling very much abused and blue.

There was nobody else they could think of who might like or need "cheer" so they turned their faces homeward. As they rustled through the dry brown leaves on the road the saw two figures shuffling along ahead of them. Both men wore khaki and old felt hats pulled down over their eyes.

"Tramps!" whispered Grace, in a startled voice.

Grace agreed to share with these unknown tramps, but she did not want to speak to them, so they decided to gallop past and then set the basket down with a note on it for the men to pick up as they came by. Patty got out her litle silver pencil and note book and wrote in a neat pretty hand: "A merry thanksgiving to you both!" The note was pinned to the hamper and then Patty set it on the side of the road where the tramps would be sure to see it.

Trot, trot, trot, and they were home. As soon as ever they turned in the gate Eugene ran to meet them crying: "Oh, have you come back!"

He seemed so glad Grace began to believe he had been lonesome, so she squeezed him, and they all went into the house where Mother was just setting the Thanksgiving feast on the table—that is, half of it.

"Oh," she cried, her eyes sparkling. "You decided to come back, did you? And both girls knew she was glad, so they went and hugged her.

Suddenly there was a great banging at the front door, a key rattled and in stalked two dusty figures, one of them carrying a big hamper.

"The tramps!" gasped Grace, then she began to laugh.

"What happened?" asked Mother, looking scared.

"Nothing," answered Dad, "only we started on our hike and after a while we began to think about home and the folks and we got so home sick we tramped all way here to celebrate with you."

"But what I want to know," grumbled Robert, "is why you girls wished this heavy basket on us, when you had the cart and here I had to carry it all this way."

"We've decided that "cheer" begins at home!" Grace cried.

"Where there's love there's always cheer" said Mother; but Eugene cried: "Well let's begin then."

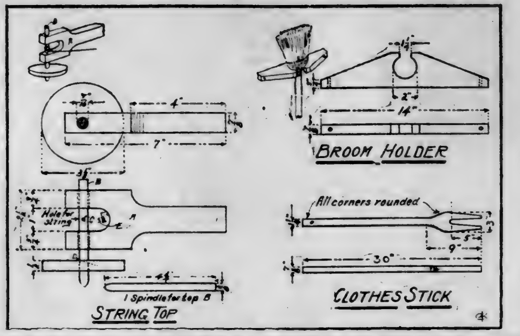
The HANDY BOY AT HOME

BY CHARLES A. KING,
STATE NORMAL SCHOOL, PLYMOUTH, N.H.



What toy has more lasting place in the affections of the average boy than a top? The longer it spins the more he values it. The top shwn in the sketch is operated by placing the holder A over the spindle of the top B, threading a piece of string through the hole C and turning the top by hand until about two feet of the string has been wound arund the spindle; then grasp the holder firmly with one hand and with the other give the string a quick pull lift the holder clear of the spindle of the top, and if the top is evenly balanced it will spin for a long time.

In making the top it will be found that the most difficult part of the work will be in making the disc perfectly round with the ⅜" hole exactly in the center and bored so straight that the spindle will be at exactly right angles with the surface of the disc of the top when it is in place. After this has been accomplished nail with a small ⅛" brad as at D. In making the holder prepare the piece from which it is to be made, then mark the center of the hole upon the top and botim edges of the piece and bore a 7-16" hole from both edges until they meet in the middle, or about half way from each side. Bore a 1" hole where it is marked at E and make the saw cuts to remove the piece to make room for the string which imparts the motive force to the top. Place the top and the holder together and locate the hole C and bore it, when the top is ready for its first trial

A broom holder is always a welcome addition to the equipment of any kitchen, for it permits the broom to be kept with its business end up which allows any moisture it may contain to dry out, and insures that the broom will not rest upon the flexible ends of the straw which is almost certain to spoil its shape. The broom holder may be made of any ordinary material, for it is an object of service and in no sense is it supposed to be ornamental.

Cut the piece from which it is to bemade to the desired length, mark the 2" hole and cut it out with a compass saw, or bore it out with an extension bit which is preferable if one is available, then mark and cut the taper, smooth and stain, or paint it as desired. It may be fastened to the wall by screws through the holes shown in the sketch.

Another implement, existing only for the good it may do in the world is the clothes stick; it may be made of ash, elm or similiar wood of medium hardness. The form shown in the sketch has been found efficient for while it picks the clothes out of the boiler quickly and surely, its tapering end permits them to slip off the stick by the turn of the wrist. There is no doubt that the stick will answer the purpose for which it is intended quite as well if it is not an accurate reproduction of the form shown in the sketch, but it is absolutely necessary that the stick should not splinter or rough up in hot water to the extent that there is danger that the splinters may enter the hands, hence it is imperative that each corner should be rounded generously and sandpapered. Even the edges of the ⅝" hole near the top of the stick to allow the stick to be hung up should be rounded.

Beside the value of the stick for its legitimate purpose, its shape and size renders it a most convenient accessory for the correction of a deserving juvenile.

After the Thanksgiving Dinner

It was Thanksgiving afternoon and all the family from tiny Tom to big jolly fat Uncle Harry had gone to Grandpa's for dinner. Now the dinner was over and they sat around the blazing logs talking of good times past and to come. Finally John suggested playing some games, and Grandma smiled saying: "I knew you wanted to come to that so I have arranged some Thanksgiving games for you that my children enjoyed when they were small. Come let us all join in the play." Then she lead them to Grandpa's smoking den, behind the library, and there on the wall was pinned a large paper on which stood a painted turkey, black crayon lines had been drawn to represent a target. Each player was then presented with a bow made of curved wloow twigs strung with elastic bands. Straight twigs having two or three chicken feathers tied to the end of them made the arrows. "This game," said Grandma, "is called Shooting The Turkey." And such fun as they did have trying to hit the turkey in the middle circle. The players stood at the opposite end of the room and took turns to shoot the turkey. A pdize was given to the one who hit theturkey bull's-eye the greatest number of times.

Then Grandma announced a new game. She gave each member of the family a small beribboned basket and told them that concealed about the house were tiny paper turkeys. The Turkey Hunt commenc end of ten minutes to the one having the ed, and again a prize was awarded at the greatest number of turkeys in the basket.

The next game required no strenuous exercise, and after telling the players to be seated, Grandma gave each one a pencil and a piece of paper. Then she read the following Nut Questions, the answer to each one being the name of a nut. Try this at your home after Thanksgiving Dinner.

What nut grows at the seashore? Beechnut

What nut did Captain Kid use? Chestnut.

What nuts calls to mind a summer vegetable? Peanut.

What nut makes bread more palatable. Butternut.

THE TURKEY'S THANKSGIVING

The stately Miss Buff-Orphington, before Thanksgiving Day,
Called all her friends together in a mystifying way;
"I have," she said, "an idea that is new without a doubt.
And hope you folks will like it and will try to help me out.
The Turkey on Thanksgiving Day is sure to have a place
At someone's dinnertable, but will scarce enjoy the grace.
That day let's give a feats somewhere, secure from human quest—

SOLUTION TO CUT-OUT-PUZZLE

About Thomas Edison

Thomas Edison, the wizard of Menlo Park, is a name known to all. We think of him whenever we think of the phonograph, but few of us know much about the play side of this great man. Here are a few anecdotes about Edison, which may be of interest to you.

Mr. Edison received his first lesson in telegraphy as a reward for personal bravery. The little son of the station agent at Mount Clemens, Michigan, was in danger of being run over by a train, and was saved only by young Edison's quickness and bravery. The father to show his gratitude offered to teach the young man telegraphy The offer was accepted, and within six months, so rapid was his progress, Edison obtained his first appointment in the telegraph office at Port Huron.

After failing to succeed in various places Edison finally drifted to New York, where he arrived penniless, friendless and hungry. The morning of his arrival he walked up and down lower Broadway wishing for something to eat. At last noticing a tea tester at his work he walked up to the man and asked him to let him have a cup of tea. The tester looked at the young man standing forlornly beside him, and then complied with his unusual request. Thus did the now famous man obtain his first breakfast in New York.

Did you know that the man who made it possible for us all to hear the finest reproductions of the human voice through the phonograph, is himself deaf and shut off from many of these fine sounds? The explanation of his deafness is given thus: When a very young boy Edison was standing on a platform of a railroad station where a freight train was unloading. One of the crew of the train as a 'joke' lifted young Edison from his feet by his ears rupturing the drums of both ears and causing the deafness, which is the greatest affliction of the inventor's life.

The spirit of fun never leaves him. He conducts a great many of his chemical experiments in open mothed tumblers—ordinary kitchen tumblers. On one occasion he had used over four hundred tumblers in an experiment which had proved a complete failure. One of his assistants said: "Well, Mr. Edison, what shall we do next?" Mr. Edison scratched his head for a moment, and then looking at the array of glasses he said slowly: "Well, I think the first thing to do is to get some more tumblers.

Once when asked to give his definition of genius, Mr. Edison replied: "Two per cent, is genius and ninety-eight per cent. is hard work." At another time when the argument that genius was inspiration was brought before him he said: "Bah! Genius is not inspired. Inspiration is perspiration.

Better Off Without It.

Old Grones—"I wish to heaven I could acquire an appetite."

What Does
The Word
"Mutual" Mean?

ANY company that issues profit-bearing policies is said by some writers to be mutual, because a part of the surplus is returned to the policyholders. These companies are really "mixed" companies—partly stock and partly mutual. Shareholders absorb some of the profits, though the major portion goes to the policyholders.

Distinct from such companies is the purely mutual organization. A purely mutual company has no shareholders and is managed as a strictly co-operative concern. Every dollar of the assets belongs to the policyholder. Every dollar of the surplus is returned to the policyholder.

Canada's Only Mutual

The only Canadian old line life company operating on a purely mutual basis is The Mutual Life of Canada. This company was originated fifty-one years ago for the purpose of supplying its members with life insurance at actual cost. To achieve that aim it was made purely mutual.

Why not make your next policy a Mutual Life policy?

The Humane Society's contest for the best letters or essays on Kindness to Animals, for prizes of Two and One Dollars, closes November 15, and should be at The Bulletin office before November 30.

The Department of agriculture has no more weed books to send until more are printed, which will take some months.—Uncle Tom.

UNCLE TOM'S LETTER

Dear Boys and Girls,—Today, I am printing the Riddles of the October contest, with the answers. Sorry they proved too hard for so many of you. How are you getting along with the Kindness To Animals' stories? I expect all of you to write one, you know, to show what this Club can do

Aunt Polly hopes you will like Black Sambo? She says he is very easy to make, and would make a good Christmas gift. Please tell me how you like him, and if you would like me to print more things like that

By the way, please don't forget that members, when they join the Club, promise to write once a month. Sometimes it is hard to get time, but as the success of the Club depends not upon its editor, but upon its members, and the letters they write, it hurts the Corner very much if you do not keep your promise. Try to make your letters as entertaining as possible. Tell us about your school work, your play, your friends, what sports you enjoy and all the things that make other letters interesting to you. Then, see what a splendid Club we will have.

I am sorry to tell you that sometimes—not very often, but still once in a while—children write in to the Club, and get a badge, and then forget all about their promise, and never write again. Surely that is not living up to the motto of the Club, and don't you think it a very shabby trick? I do. And they do not return the badge.

So please keep up your end, members, and if there is anything you can suggest to make The Corner more interesting, please tell me, and I shall try to carry it out.—Uncle Tom.

Happy, and young, and gay is he;
He looks to the east, and then to the west,
Saying, "Where, oh where will the nuts be the best?

"For winter is coming, the days grow cold,
The sheep and the lambs are all in the fold;
I'll new-line and carpet my snug little nest
With mosses and leaves, ere I take my long rest.

"'The children, with soft steps, come creeping around
When they spy me at work—but I'm off with a bound
They come for the nuts, so I'll work with a will,
And with both cheeks as baskets, my storehouse I'll fill."

BLACK SAMBO

Materials needed—1 small ball of black wool; 1 small ball of red wool; 4 medium knitting needles—rather coarse ones if steel ones are used. Same batting for filling, and two white beads for the eyes.

How to Make

Begin by casting on ten stitches on each of the three needles. Knit twenty rounds, taking care not to have loose stitches either at the beginning or end of the needles.

Break off the black yarn, and fasten on the red keeping the ends on the wrong side of the work. Knit three red rounds, this strip being used merely as a gage for the position of the head when the doll is being made up.

Join again the black wool, and knit another thirty rounds for the body. Then divide all the stitches equally for the legs. Slip the fifteen stitches on to a thread, and arrange the other fifteen stitches on the three needles. Knit thirty-thre rounds for the leg. Then cast off.

Arrange the stitches on the thread on the needles, and knit the other leg in the same manner.

For the arms, cast on four stitches on each of three needles, and knit twenty-four rounds. If it is easier, you may cast on twelve stitches on one needle, and knit alternately one row plain and one row purl, until you have twenty-four rows altogether, and then cast off, and stitch together on the wrong side.

In order that the doll may be of good proportions, the body should be about twice the length of the head, the length of the legs equal to the length of the body, and the arms shorter and narrower than the legs. So if these directions do not make a doll the size you wish, you may increase or decrease the stitches, and make any size you desire.

To Make Up

Turn the kniting on the wrong side, and catch up any loose stitches or stray ends that may have been left in the making.

Run a gathering thread round each leg, draw up tightly, and fasten off very securely on the wrong side.

Fill up the legs with batting (or randlings of old yarn would do), and press into shape until both are alike.

To finish the head, draw up the opening tightly, inserting a tassel of black wool to represent a tuft of hair. Or, if you prefer, fasten strands of wool all over the head, using a bone crôchet ook for the purpose. Clip the wool all around to the desired length, and fray it out with a wire brush.

Stitch two white beads in place for the eyes, and with the red wool and a darning needle make nose and mouth.

IS THIS SO?

Little sheep upon the hill, I have watched you every day,
Running up and down together, like the baby clouds at play.
Mother says the cozy blankets under which I go to sleep
And she says you are not really striped with pink and striped with blue
But the stripes are on my blankets, so I'm sure they grew on you.

OUR HANDICRAFT BRANCH

To Make a Top from a Nut

Take a nut, which is about one inch in diameter. With a sharp knife bore a hole through both ends, so that you can put a big nail through. Bore another hole in the middle of the nut which will be equal distance from the other two holes.

Then take a stick about three inches long, and smooth it so that it will go through the first two holes, but leave it thicker at one end so that it will not slip through.

Tie a string around the middle of the stick and push the string through one of the first holes, and then in the middle hole. Then push the stick through.

To spin the top, wind up the string and let it go loose again.—Anna M. E. Schultz*, Hayter.

HARD WORK

"You lok very tired," said the kind old lady to the weary-looking tramp sitting in the park.

"Well, I should say I ought," replied the man, "Digging up roads is heavy work."

"'How long have you been doing that?"

Uncle Tom's Mail Bag

Sister Will Join Too

Dear Uncle Tom,—I have lots of time today, because there is no school. I like my badge very much. My sister is going to join the club, too, for she likes to read The Corner, and so do I.

Who won first prize in the drawing contest? My drawings were the animals' heads. What is Aunt Polly doing these days? Is she still running after the mouse?

We finished threshing long ago—threshed over four thousand bushels. It snowed on Sunday here. Did it at your place? There are thirty-two children coming to school now. In my grade are three boys and five girls.—Walter Ducholke, Box 57, Stony Plain, Nov. 7.

I suppose you had a fine time on your holiday. Did you have a Thanksgiving turkey? Julia Lyslo won the drawing prize. Yes, I know your heads, which were very well done, but you should have seen Julia's Dutchman. Aunt Polly is running after the kitten these days. It is always getting into mischief, because it is so full of fun. But we do not see any trace of mice. Yes we had a little snow that day too, but have had more since.—Uncle Tom.

• • •

A Lost Badge

Dear Uncle Tom—I lost my badge when I was going to school one day. Will you please send me another one? I am in Grade 8 now. I would join the riddle contest but I am not very good at riddles. We had enough snow on Sunday to cover the ground, but it soon went away. I hear you are married, Uncle Tom, and that your wife is Aunt Polly.—Elsie Ferlin, Bashaw, Nov. 5.

I shall place your name in the Lost Badges list for a month, Elsie, as is the custom. Perhaps you would suggest some other kind of contest which you would like. I want to have competitions that all members enjoy. Aunt Polly sends good wishes to you.—Uncle Tom.

• • •

Likes the Messages

Dear Uncle Tom,—I received my badge, and thank you very much. How is Aunt Polly standing this cold weather? It is pretty cold going to school, at least I find it so.

Could someone send me the words of "Feather Your Nest"?

I find some of the messages very interesting, don't you? We had a school fair on September 13. I won first prize for bread, and second for a collection of fruit and vegetables.

I suppose everyone is expecting snow now. When did you get a letter from Elsie Unterschultz? She is my cousin. One of her brothers is going to school in Edmonton. We are to ahve a Thanksgiving supper in our school—Josephburg school—and I wish the Club every success, and hope everyone has a good time on Thanksgiving.—Helen Hennig, Fort Saskatchewan, Oct. 31.

Glad you like the badge, Helen, and hope you wear it to remind you to write often. Aunt Polly says she is too fat to mind the cold weather much. Perhaps you are not so fat as she is. Congratulations on your prize-winning. Yes, I find the Messages interesting too. Are you sending in a Kindness to Animals letter? Elsie is a naughty girl, Helen, for she has not written for months. Her last letter was printed in March. If you write to her, remind her that the Club is lonesome for her. Hope you had a jolly Thanksgiving.—Uncle Tom.

• • •

Brothers Were Confirmed

Dear Uncle Tom,—I have been out visiting my aunt for a week, and had a good time. Today is Sunday, and it is snowing. I am thirteen years to spank me yet, and I hope they won't. Helga made a nice birthday cake for me, and we'll celebrate on it when they come home from church.

My two eldest brothers were confirmed the Sunday before last. Pastor Lunday is having services at the Lutheran church today, and so my brothers and sisters will be going and I shall be alone, waiting

It was good of Aunt Polly to remember me with a fancy work book, and I thank her ever so much for it. All best wishes to Uncle Tom, Aunt Polly and all the members of the Club.—Thora E. Johnson, Hay Lakes, Nov. 6.

Many happy returns of the day, Thora, even if the wishes are late. Hope the cake was good. Aunt Polly hopes you found the book useful. I am sure you were very proud of your brothers. When does your turn come?—Uncle Tom.

• • •

A New Suggestion

Dear Uncle Tom,—Do you know my handwriting now? Who am I? Well, I am the girl who got the name mess straightened out. Say, Uncle Tom, I hope you like this suggestion and will accept it. Let's have a contest of the best writing.—Mina Miner.

That's a good suggestion, Mina and I shall see if I can arrange one that will be fair to all the members whether in Grade 1 or 10. I've taken a good look at your handwriting, and think I shall know it again.—Uncle Tom.

• • •

A New Member at Abilene

Dear Uncle Tom,—I wish to become a member of your interesting Club, and will try to write often. We have no school now, but I hope it soon will start. We milk one cow in the morning, and three in the evening.

I have five sisters and a little baby brother. He is very fat and cute, I think. My oldest sister is down at Prince Albert, and the second one is working at the University of Alberta, but all the rest of us are at home. Greetings to Aunt Polly and yourself.—Annie Olsen, Abilene, Oct. 20.

Welcome to the Club, Annie. I am sending a badge to remind you to write to the Club once a month. You will have plenty of time, now, when there is no school. What a family of girls, to be sure! You will be lonesome with your sisters away. How old are you? Thanks for kind message.—Uncle Tom.

• • •

A New Member From Warspite

Dear Uncle Tom,—I should very much like to become a member of your Club. I am 15 and in Grade 8. I have a sister in Edmonton, going to high school, and she likes it well. I have one sister and two brothers at home. My mother is a school teacher. I expect to go to Edmonton after Christmas to go to school.

I should be pleased if you would send me a weed book. I read in one of the letters that a member wished the words of "Till We Meet Again," and I am sending them. If any girl members of my own age would care to write to me, I surely would answer.—Mina Rockwell, Warspite, Nov. 7.

Sorry about the weed book, Mina. Read the Bulletin Board. We welcome you to the Club, and I am sending a badge to remind you of the obligation to write once a month. I thank you for the words of the song. Why not write first when you see a request for correspondents, Mina? Let me know if you decide to come to Edmonton.—Uncle Tom.

• • •

A Pleasant Ride

Dear Uncle Tom,—Last Sunday my folk and I had a very pleasant ride in the car to Bittern Lake, passing through the Battle River hills, which seemed very wonderful to me. I passed into Grade 4, and certainly was glad. I have three little kittens, and they are all black.—Irene Rude, R.R. No. 1, Tofield, Nov. 8.

What do you call your kittens, Irene? Aunt Polly calls hers The Imp. I named it. Do you like the name? You must have enjoyed the ride. The scenery about there is fine. Congrats. on your success.—Uncle Tom.

A Colt Called Patches

Dear Uncle Tom—Here I am again, though I haven't written since spring. We had two weeks of holidays in September, and our school started again October 3. We have a new teacher and I am in Grade 7. I expect to take exams. at Christmas. We expect to have a Christmas concert.

I own a little grey colt. Its mother died this summer. I call it Patches. It was tame, so that anyone could go up to it, but now it is wild, and no one can get near it.

We haven't threshed yet. The weather is fine still, though it rained the other day. I am going to try in the riddle contest. How is Aunt Polly?

I should like to correspond with Pauline Hicks. I am just her age.—Opal Tilson, Landonville, Oct. 16.

I feel sure that if you write Pauline, she will answer you, Opal. We are very glad that you have decided to visit us again for we get lonesome for our old members when they stay away too long. We hope you will be successful in your exams. You will have some fun breaking Patches if she does not get tamer, won't you? Aunt Polly says to tell you if you want to buy a cold, she has a good healthy one to sell. Come again soon.—Uncle Tom.

FORMER BANDIT LIFER AND WIFE WHO IS AIDING PRISON HONOR SYSTEM CAMPAIGN

Edward H. Morrell, once famous California outlaw, sentenced to life at hard labor and finally pardoned through the efforts of a San Quentin prison warden, is now pushing a countrywide campaign for the honor system in prisons. After his release he met and married a young girl graduate of the University of California, who he says was the inspiration for his work. Morrell claims to be the originator of the honor system. The photograph shows Morrell and his wife.

Heavy Trading Done in Government Bonds

TORONTO, Nov. 18—Prices were better maintained on the stock exchange today, though the volum of trading decreased. Transactions in government bonds ran up to $604,750. Under this remarkable demand for bonds, other securities were neglected. Brazilian sold up ⅝ at 76. Cement and General Electric were also higher. Mackay was a popular issue, gaining 1½ points to 79. A recovery in Riordon folowed the extension of one year granted by the creditors to the company. Imperial oil rose 2¼ to 98¾, while North Star was 25 cents higher at 4.25, and Elk Basin, a fraction up.

HEARTBURN

A SEVERE CASE

In cases of this trouble there is a gnawing and burning pain in the stomach attended by disturbed appetite. It is generally caused by great acidity of the stomach, and whenever too much food is taken, it is liable to ferment, and becomes extremely sour, causing heartburn. In such cases vomiting often occurs, and what is thrown up is sour and sometimes bitter.

The one way to get rid of heartburn is to keep your liver active by using

MILBURN'S

and you will have no heartburn or other liver troubles such as constipation, jaundice, water brash, floating specks before the eyes, coated tongue, foul breath, etc.

Miss Agnes Cutting, Shallow Lake, Ont., writes:—"I have had heartburn for a long time. There were gnawing and burning pains in my stomach, and then when I vomited there was a sour and bitter taste. I used two vials of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and they have cleared me of my heartburn. I don't think they can be beaten by any other medicine."

Price, 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ontario

WEEKLY REVIEW of MUSIC in EDMONTON

In a recent discussion anent the quality that best fits Sunday evening concerts a well-meaning gentleman suggested as a means to meet with the approval of all factions a large proportion of the program should be of a sacred character. That suggestion is responsible for the following few and brief remarks on the subject.

In its application to music "sacred" is a rather vague term. To most people "sacred" is applied to all music played in a church; others limit the term to the music of the church. Yet there is music sacred enough that rarely if ever is heard within the walls of a church while there is an equal amount of secular music masquerading as sacred played every Sunday in various churches.

Take for instance the case of the oratorio. The oratorio is a sacred work of great scope which requires soloists, chorus and orchestra. "The Messiah" is an example which will readily be recognized by all. Naturally the proper sphere for a performance of such a work is the church. It is certain that within the walls of a sacred building one can more easily settle into the frame of mind in which such music should be approached and can therefore listen with a heightened reverence.

An oratorio generally begins with an orchestral overture. The body of the work includes a number of massive choruses and many recitatives and airs for solo voices. The contrapuntal style is in evidence and there is really no particular quality in the music that distinguishes it from any other type. As a rule it is similar to operatic music. Indeed one of the most popular oratorios of recent years has been the concert version of Saint-Saens' "Samson and Delilah" a highly operatic [illegible].

But oratorios in their entirety are very seldom performed in a church for church purposes. Only excerpts are played or sung.

A cantata may be on either a sacred or secular subject accompanied [illegible] arranged for soloists with [illegible] chorus alone. It is generally much shorter than an oratorio and in other respects is there [illegible] difference.

Next one might consider the forms of [illegible]. Properly speaking the music of the church includes all classes of composition written for the express purpose of performance in the church from the grandest oratorio to the smallest hymn-tune or chant.

There are many churches and many forms of church music. The Roman church has received the best efforts of great composers while the same may be said of various branches of the Protestant service and the Greek Church.

The most widely known forms of church music are Passions, Masses of different kinds and sometimes penned with a view to secular performance, the Latin hymn "Stabat Mater Dolorosa", the canticles such as the Te Deum, Benedictus and Magnificat; the Church Cantata; and the Motet.

It is a sad fact that of the many forms of public music music of the church is less well rendered than any other. However in regard to that it is a comfort to know that the choirs of Edmonton and Calgary and indeed throughout the west are better than those in most parts of the world. The difficulties in the way of superlatively performed church music are many. The choristers are unpaid and rehearsals are few yet the music of the church is very seldom given a really adequate presentation in the church and right there a factor that might be of educational and spiritual helpfulness is lost.

Then again much secular music finds its way into the church and church services. It is no uncommon thing to hear the organist play "Love's Greeting", "Simple Confession" and various "Serenades" while the collection is being gathered in. Such compositions are highly artistic and very musicianly but they are not "sacred" in a religious way. Also it is no uncommon occurrence for a skilled organist to take "Hail Hail the Gang's All Here" or "I Found a Lemon in the Garden of Love" and twist them into very effective posthumious offerings.

In the last analysis it would appear as though "sacred" when applied to music is merely the outcome of an association of ideas. Play a composition and name it "The Maiden's Prayer" and immediately a reverent expression will steal over the listener's countenance and he fondly imagines he is listening to "sacred" music. Take away that title and call it "Ragtime Liz" and there is little of the "sacred" left to it.

The music played at Sunday evening concerts in Edmonton has always been of a high order. Overtures and symphonies—the most elaborate and advanced of all musical compositions—together with lighter pieces of "Love's Greeting" type are the order of the day while some programs have included fantasies on a number of hymn tunes. By all odds include sacred music on programs, but before doing so be sure it is sufficiently good to bear comparison with the best symphonic music of Beethoven, Mendelssohn and others, else "sacred" pages will be the [illegible].

There is only one more point. The only way to learn to love and appreciate the best in music, to differentiate between the good and not so good, is to listen to it, listen on every possible occasion.

Braham's Premier American Concert a Great Success

John Braham, born in London 1774 died in London February 18th, 1856 is better known today as the composer of the "Death of Nelson." Braham, besides being a composer of no mean merit, was perhaps the greatest tenor vocalist of his time. He made his first appearance as a vocalist at the Royalty Theatre, Well Close Square, London in 1787 after which he immediately became famous. He practically had become world-famed ere he had the opportunity of making his first appearance at Drury Lane (1796) after which he toured in every important city in Europe with triumphant success. He was well on in years when he made his debut at New York in his favorite oratorio, "The Messiah," and his reception there would have made many a mighty man nervous; the enthusiasm was of the highest possible description.

Long before the doors opened, a dense crowd surrounded the entrance to the Tabernacle; and, by eight o'clock, between two and three thousand people were seated in breathless silence to hear the great Braham, whose reputation in London as a first tenor, both in sacred and secular music had been undisturbed for the last forty-five years.

When he made his appearance before the vast American audience the applause and cheering with which he was greeted had a visible effect upon his nerves, for he commenced, although an experienced artist of years, trembling and rather flat; but he soon rallied and became himself. His first tender and expressive cadence was received with a feeling of surprise which seemed too great for utterance; but, when he once showed the full power of his wonderful voice, there was no controlling the enthusiasm of the auditors. "Thy rebuke hath broken his heart," brought tears into the eyes, in spite of many a manly struggle not to show such weakness; but "Thou shalt dash them in pieces" was a perfect tornado of tone, and a volume of voice to which there appeared to be no end. His crescendo, at the end was the most extraordinary musical effort ever listened to. It appeared as if a thousand mortals were dashed into pieces like a potter's vessel; in short, each effort was crowned with increased effect and astonishment. In his "Jeptha's Rash Vow" no one can imagine anything more expressive of the heart-broken grief of a father than Mr. Braham in the words, "My only daughter—so dear a child!" and the struggle to sing "But Gilead hath triumphed o'er his foes"; again with convulsive sobs, "Therefore tomorrow's dawn," and the hopeless "I can no more," seemed almost too much to listen to.

A report of this remarkable concert speaking of Braham said:

"His expression of feeling and tenderness he can never lose, for it was born in him, and will descend with him to the grave."

Jazz a Feature in English Church

A cable from London, says:—Religion with jazz has been introduced in the old Congregational Church in [illegible] Square. Two huge gayly colored lanterns were hung in the centre of the church. A concert platform with a piano was placed under the pulpit, while the pulpit was beautified with silken upholstery of blue and silvery gray. A notice posted on the door stated that the secretary of the Fellowship league of the guild house intended to apply for a license for music and dancing to be carried on within the premises.

Under the leadership of J. B. Daly, the band of the 49th Battalion, 1st Battalion the Edmonton Regiment, will give a concert in the Metropolitan theatre on Sunday evening at 8.45.

This will be the first appearance this season of the band and Mr. Daly is sparing no effort to ensure the success of the concert. The program will include Rossini's "Barber of Seville" overture, a selection from Gounod's "Faust" and a fantasia descriptive of "A Soldier's Life."

R. L. Bateman will be the soloist of the evening.

Music Important Development in National Conduct

Although music has made a considerable advance in the last half century, it has not yet advanced far enough, Sir Henry Hadow said in his address to the Staff Sight Singing College, at their annual meeting at the Royal College of Music. There was far too much belief that the learning of music at school or college meant learning to play something or sing something. The idea that people should study music in exactly the same way and from the same point of view and in the same spirit that we study literature had not yet percolated as it ought to percolate through the whole of civilization.

"No one supposes," he said, "that you teach people Shakespeare with the idea of their becoming actors or even dramatists. You teach them because Shakespeare is an essential part of their mental resources and mental wealth. And I assert that to teach them Beethoven is exactly of the same importance, and exactly on the same level.

"It is not true at all that there is a difference between music and literature, and that music appeals to the emotions and literature to the intelligence. It is not only nonsense, but mischievous nonsense. Music, just as literature, appeals to the whole of the spiritual nature of man. In so far as you can separate and distinguish them from each other, I maintain that whatever range is covered by literature in its appeal to human nature is covered also, in a different medium, not less surely, not less certainly, by music."

"Why," he asked, "have we so constantly ignored music? In some measure musicians themselves are responsible. One of the defects, until the last generation, was the extraordinary inadequacy of books about music, and our study of musical theory is still a great deal too much confined to dry rules of grammar and composition. We have not nearly enough penetrated to the centre and core and heart of the whole thing. Music is something which belongs to ordinary human life and intercourse, from which nothing human is alien, and until we realize that and frame our music and history and life and civilization on that certainty we shall not deserve to bring it back to its proper place in the ordinary life of our country.

"What would you know of Shakespeare," he asked, "if you had no means of making his acquaintance except at the theatre? How do you suppose you are going to know anything of Bach and Beethoven by hearing the B Minor Mass and the 'Eroica' once a year? We make the acquaintance of the poets by taking them with us into our arm-chair and reading them over and over again. Why don't we do the same with Beethoven?

"People say you can't read music. Nonsense. I believe we can do more to make music familiar to us by reading it as we read the plays of Shakespeare and the novels of Dickens than by any other means so practicable at the present moment. No one really understands music who appreciates it only through the ear.

"We are essentially a musical people. From centuries back, when England allowed itself a free hand, it has taken a lead in music and stood in the front rank of all European countries. We are coming to that front rank again. We have now a generation of composers and performers who can hold their own with those of any other country in the world. Another generation and we shall have surpassed them. It is for us who are not composers and not performers to see we bear our part of that great national advance, and the part which I venture to indicate is to see that music is no longer something isolated from the intellectual life, but something that bears as inherent a part in it as the great literature of which we are all so fond."

PROGRAM IS POSTPONED

Owing to the serious illness of Mrs Helen Davies Sherry, of Saskatoon, the guest program at the Women's Musical Club, sceduled for Saturday has been indefinitely postponed. Consequently there will be no meeting of the club today.

There is this to be said for the cranks. A good many of them succeed in starting something, and that is more than most of their critics do.

Sense in Make-up of Band Programs

So long as the public pays the piper it has a moral and a legal right to call the tune. Any bandmaster will assert that the popularity of his band, and therefore the recurrence and frequency of its engagements, are determind by his willingness and ability to give the public the music it wants—failures are those who insist on giving it the music it needs.

There you have the secret of success in program work. The best program is that which gives the greatest pleasure to the greatest number. A highbrow in an American paper recently said that the best program is that which "is made by those who consider themselves servants of the art." That is sublime idealism (and idealism always has our support), but idealism is notoriously a bad paymaster. The practical idealism says that the best program is made by those who are servants of the public.

As for the idea of the censorship of the "local musician of recognized taste," that is as democratic and as workable as the censorship of menus by a gourmand "of recognized taste." Musicians cannot feed their stomachs on highbrow notions; they depend for their existence on the patronage of the public. And if the public wants light music (although we all know that it really needs classical music) the musician has no alternative but to give it light music. They do not play it because they like to—they do so because of the piper.—The Musical Mail.

Doubtful Value Forced Applause

Applauding an artist is the recognized method of showing one's appreciation of a musical performance. Some musicians love their art sufficiently to value such demonstrativeness far more than the fabulous sums that they can command. When one has been pleased it is only fair that one should show it in the conventional way. The ordinary musical audience is so widely awake to a sense of their duty in this respect that they have succeeded in reducing hand-clapping to a mere mechanical process bearing no connection to any appreciative feeling. One has only to watch the facial expressions of those who insist on applauding a piece that has fallen rather flat on the audience to have this point thrust home in all its naked truthfulness.

Paris Opera Back to Evening Dress

The Paris opera will soon return to the pre-war custom of not admitting any one, except to the upper galleries, who is not attired in full evening dress. Since the war democratized all classes anything from a soft collar to an ordinary business suit has been permitted, but the high social arbiters have decreed that this must end and are planning to give back to the opera the brilliance which used to characterize its performances.

Mixing with the motley throng apparently did not please many of the titled devotees, who have sent out letters to prominent members of the American and British colonies in Paris, as well as to the French 400, asking them to subscribe in advance for the entire season so that the best seats will be reserved for those whose elegance can uphold Parisian traditions.

Some Mountains Emit Odd Sounds

Darwin was one of the first to call attention to the mountain El Bramador in Chili, which emits a peculiar sound at times; and in the midst of Pyramid Lake, Nevada, there is another which utters a musical note, which, in certain states of the wind, begins like the jingling of countless silver bells and ends with a loud strain, resembling the low pedal notes of an organ. These sounds are attributed to the friction of the wind and the movements of sands, as in the case of the "singing sands" of Lob-Nor, in China, the island of Eigg, in Scotland, and elsewhere.

POULTRY FOR THE XMAS TRADE SHOULD BE MARKETED EARLY

The receipts of poultry during the past week show a slight decrease and prices on springers and ducks and geese are somewhat stronger. Present prices F.O.B. Edmonton are, springers 12c, fowl 10c, roosters 7c and ducks and geese 13 to 14c and turkeys 15 to 18c. The receipts are largely springers and fowl with some duck and geese, and the quality of these lines are reported to be improving steadily. Most of the dealers are not quoting prices on turkeys. Some are getting shipped in but the quality is very poor and dealers are advising farmers to feed them for a few weeks longer and market them in time to take advantage of the Christmas market.

Dealers advise farmers who are intending to take advantage of Christmas market to ship early enough. The local market is supplied largely by receipts from the immediate districts and the bulk of the receipts are shipped to outside markets. This means that the farmers who intend to sell on the best market must ship his poultry so that it will reach Edmonton from December 10 to 15 so that it can be shipped to outside markets in time for Christmas.

Men Go to Police Station Here for Crime of Being Homeless and Workless

Edmonton Has The Unenviable Reputation of Not Possessing a Shelter Where the Honest Man, Devoid of Means or Work, Can Obtain Cover From the Winter.

Men in the city of Edmonton, who are unfortunate enough to be both workless and penniless must go to the police station. There is no other avenue open for them whereby they can obtain shelter from the cold of our northern winter. Though the fact that they homeless and hopeless does not render them criminals in the eyes of the police force, there is no recourse for them but to seek the hospitality of the police station, hence a condition pertains which places Edmonton in a very poor light when contrasted with the other western cities of equal size That last resource of the poor and unfortunate—the Salvation Army—due to the fact that the quarters placed at its disposal by the city are inadequate, cannot handle the problem as they feel it should be handled; their little building is filled to overflowing, and the officials of the Army view with alarm the conditions which are likely to result when the really cold weather comes and the transient laborers return to the city from such work as they are now able to obtain.

No Room For Homeless.

The little building on Namayo avenue rented by the city to the Salvation Army at a nominal figure is crowded to capacity; men are sleeping on the floors and new comers arriving in the city, who are without means, must be refused admittance and sent to the police station, so that a man whose only crime is that he belongs to that class who is "always with us" must take the final step which is the dread of the citizen who wants work and cannot obtain it.

Where but the funds available, there is ample space on the lot where the Salvation Army shelter stands for the erection of a wooden building which could house a hundred or more of the homeless The room and the need exists but the Army—always on the edge of "financial embarrassment"—cannot undertake the construction, and unless the city authorities or the citizens of Edmonton come to the rescue it is likely that Edmonton will see scenes enacted this winter which will not readily be forgotten.

What the officials of the Salvation Army suggest is that a bunk-house be built, warmed with a large heater. Open it at 10 p.m., and close it at eight in the morning, simply using it as sleeping quarters. During the day the homeless can keep moving, find odd corners in which to keep from freezing, but at the night the quest is hopeless. At the best this scheme is cold charity, but better far than the present condition of supplying the men with direction for finding the police station. Naturally the city police do not welcome the visitors; they have just about all they can handle in their own legitimate line. The Salvation Army does want the homeless however, but cannot assist them in any way for the reasons stated. It is distinctly "up to" Edmonton!

Shelter is Real Home.

To investigate conditions at the present time, The Bulletin visited the Army shelter in company with Ensign Cooper, being considerably impressed by the feeling of "homeliness" which pervaded the building Despite ideas to the contrary, the Salvation Army shelter is run on the lines of a hotel as far as possible. The inmates are the "guests" they are treated with every courtesy of the Army, and in general the tact exhibited by the officers in dealing with these poor broken men is something which is not lightly forgotten. The appellation of "Mister" is invariably used; the Salvation Army recognizes that though homeless and hopeless these men have known better days and that they will respond to kindness and courtesy. They do.

One of the tenets on which the success of the Salvation Army's work is based is that they must help the man to help himelf; there are no drones in the S.A. "hive" and every man must do his little bit to help on the work—and they do it very readily indeed. The work is apportioned according to a man's physical ability and age. The younger men saw the firewood, scrub the floors and perform other similar tasks, while the older men make the beds, polish the woodwork, help in the kitchen and so on—and they all do it cheerfully. When visited everyone was busy on some task or another; in the kitchen one old man was peeling potatoes, whistling the while; another old chap, bordering on the seventies, was dusting the woodwork of the bedrooms, while the more able bodied were scrubbing floors and sawing wood. Some, whose time it was to rest were in the cheery living room, talking of other days and smoking the pipe of peace. Although the Salvation Army does not believe in tobacco, it does not prohibit its use and even buys it for the guests. The same rational treatment is met with in other ways too; for instance, although the Army believes in church service, it is never pressed on inmates of any of its etablishments, announcement is made of the service but no attempt is made to coerce the men.

A Happy Spirit.

The guests of the Salvation Army are mostly there for life. Too old to work, without friends and relatives there is no other avenue open to them, and without the ministrations of the Army they would starve. In addition to the old men in residence, other men, younger but equally unfortunate are arriving daily and there is no place to put them, even for the night. The relations between the Army officers and the guests in the hostel are admirable; there is absolutly no indication that any charity is being offered, and the happy spirit shown by the broken wanderers is the best criterion of what this remarkable institution is doing in the way of practical Christianity.

This summer the little building was repainted and decorated inside, and everything is sweet and clean; bright varnish, new wall paper and spotless rooms. Touring the building, fragments of conversation between the officers and the guest brought home forcibly the spirit which prevails in the hostel—"Well, Mr. Jones, were you warm enough last night, did you get another blanket"; "How are you today, Mr. Smith? Are you happy here? Are you happier than when you came here?"; "Did you get your tobacco yesterday Mr. Brown?" and so on, in every case the answer being a cheery affirmative. The rules for the guests are simple and by no means strict—the whole scheme is based on real Christian charity, and did but fund permit the Salvation Army could look after all the unfortunates who will drift in here this winter. Something will have to be done and that right soon.

Police Advocate Bunk-House.

Questioned regarding the matter of accommodation for the homeless here, the city police are of the opinion that one of the empty barns or warehouses could be readily turned into a bunk-house at a reasonable figure. With the adjunct of a large stove, some wooden bunks, and mattresses, any of these buildings could be quickly put in shape. There is a large stock of mattrasses stored in the armories here which were formerly used by the Army, and if these and some lumber could be obtained the problem of housing the homeless during cold weather would be solved in the main.

The majority of the men who are now drifting in are from the other provinces, some coming even from Ontario, and it is evident from what the men say that northern Alberta has been held up as the mecca of the workless and a convenient dumping ground. The men are here, they are homeless and without shelter of any kind and it is apparent that the problem has got to be faced immediately.

APPEAL COURT HEARS DISPUTE OVER COLLISION

Clash Between Automobile And Cow Results in Long Extended Litigation

To settle a civil dispute as to the liability between a cow and an automobile in a collision which took place between them over a year ago near Innisfail, five justices of the supreme court of Alberta are in session in the appellate division here Friday. The impact between these two bodies was so great that the cow was maimed for life and had to be shot and the car was so injured that it cost the driver $375 to put it in repair and running order again. The owner of the cow claimed that the automobile is responsible and the owner of the car says that the cow was guilty of negligence in getting in his pathway.

The whole question is being threshed out by way of appeal and while the'r lordships are impressed with the gravity of their task are nevertheless apparently getting considerable enjoyment out of the unique arguments presented by the contending lawyers especially by those advanced by Robert E. McLaughlin who has the responsibility of defending the alleged blameable car and its owner.

The case came to trial last March when Frank Johnson the plaintiff sued Dr. J. W. Griffin for $157 damages.

Judge Mahaffy tried the case and after hearing the evidence of the plaintiff dismissed the claim and allowed the counter claim of the automobile driver.

From this judgment the owner of the cow appeals to the full court en banc and the big question before their lordships is, who was to blame for the accident, the cow or the auto.

NEW TOWNSITE IS RAPIDLY FILLING

The new townsite at Waterways has now been completely surveyed, say the officials of the A. & G. W. and the townsite is filling up rapidly. Up to the present time over 24 lots have been taken, and a number more have been reserved for applicants. The majority of the lessees are merchants.

The lakes are starting to freeze now, and it makes it very dangerous for stock. Geo. Dodds lost a very valuable horse which happened out on the ice and got drowned.

Many hunters are coming in this year to try for the moose and deer. It has been rather noisy in the woods lately, but we are having a nice snow now for tracking, so Mr. Moose beware.

The village is growing rapidly and the buildings being erected are of the very best. Mr. Zangras' new house would be a credit to any city.

Alberta Gov't Ready to Grapple With Problem of Better Control Of Liquor Traffic in Province

Framing of Definite Policy Will Be Undertaken During Next Few Weeks—Effort at Rigid Enforcement of Existing Law Likely to be First Step Decided Upon—Agitation for Adoption of Quebec System Now Under Way in Some Quarters.

What policy to follow in regard to the better enforcement of the Alberta Liquor act is a problem giving the provincial government no end of trouble at the present time. While not yet taking the question up in cabinet for the final adoption of a course of action Premier Greenfield and Attorney-General J. E. Brownlee have been given the matter serious thought for several weeks and have been confronted with a multitude of viewpoints in their numerous discussions with private individuals and various organizations and with their investigation of the working out of prohibition systems in the other provinces.

It is understood that the liquor problem will be one of the first taken up by Premier Greenfield and his cabinet now that the southern relief situation is being dealt with by the newly appointed survey board. Probably this discussion on the framing of a definite policy on prohibition enforcement will be begun during the next week or ten days.

So far as can be learned the ultimate decision of the government is likely to be for an attempt at much more rigid enforcement of the existing liquor laws without radical changes excepting possibly a limitation of monthly prescription forms to the doctors and a more thorough check on the distribution of liquor through the drug stores.

The advisability of holding a plebiscite on the question of prohibition has not been overlooked by the government but it now appears unlikely that such a vote will be taken for a time at least. Opinion seems to favor a most uncompromising effort at enforcement of the present statutes first.

It is known that the pressure which has existed for some months in the province to have Alberta adopt the British Columbia system of liquor control has decreased materially within the last month or so, and there is now an agitation under way to urge the government to adopt the Quebec system of government control of the hard liquors and allow the general sale of beers and light wines. However, it seems safe to say that this policy will not eventually be endorsed by the government.

As the situation stands today all indications point to a thorough and systematic effort to enforce the existing legislation before any drastic alteration is proposed in the liquor act.

YORATH EXPLAINS CITY'S PROPOSALS IN ABLE MANNER

Predicts to Board of Trade A Reduction of Two Mills Next Year

In a manner which demonstrated fully to all business men assembled his comprehensive grasp of this city's financial condition, Commissioner Yorath addressed the Edmonton Board of Trade Friday noon on his report of assessment and taxation. Prolonged applause followed the commissioner's explanations and a hearty vote of thanks on behalf of the Edmonton Board of Trade was moved by W. J. Stark and seconded by J. C. Sherry. Subsequent to the commissioner's address, William [illegible] expressed his appreciation of what he had heard and requested the privilege of also addressing board of trade members on assessment and taxation issues at a later date.

Facts and figures in regard to this city's financial standing were introduced by Commissioner Yorath who declared that the various proposals now being considered would effect a reduction of at least two mills in the tax rate for 1922.

The financing of capital and current accounts were ably referred to by Commissioner Yorath. He said that a readjustment of the publicly owned utilities had converted the financial condition of this department of civic affairs from a loss of $122,394 for the first nine months of last year to a profit for the same period of this year of $148,626.

The general situation in regard to assessment and taxation had been changed during the past few years, Mr. Yorath said. In 1913 there was an assessment of over one hundred and eighty-eight millions on land alone which was reduced to one hundred and thirty-two millions in 1916.

Today he followed the assessment on land alone had been brought to approximately sixty-one millions and on buildings to about eighteen millions. All this had meant a consequent reduction in the city's general revenue due to the general reduction in assessment amounting to seven hundred and ninety-eight thousand dollars.

To offset this loss, Commissioner Yorath said it was proposed to tax public utilities just as they would be taxed if privately owned by [illegible]. It is hoped to raise at least three hundred and fifty thousand dollars. It was thought, he said, that in addition to raising this amount of money from taxation of utilities it might also be possible to reduce the rates.

Another proposal was that of eliminating the discount given for the payment of taxes and substituting the assessment of a penalty if these taxes are not paid by a fixed date. This adjustment, it is estimated, [illegible] approximately two hundred and forty-five thousand dollars. Then again, it was the hope that one hundred [illegible] tion in the sinking fund [illegible].

In addition [illegible] it is also anticipated that at least [illegible] hundred thousand [illegible] city's finances as a result of the re[illegible] dollars.

Commissioner Yorath announced that at the [illegible] that citizens should be given every [illegible] and assessment. At these meetings charts and lantern slides will be available to give a clear elucidation.

UNEMPLOYMENT IS SERIOUS

Estimated That There Are One Thousand Returned Men Out of Work Here

The general situation among unemployed returned men is becoming more acute and on Friday close to three hundred veterans were listed as being jobless with little prospects offered for their immediate employment. It is estimated that in the Edmonton district the number of unemployed returned men has reached the one thousand mark.

At a meeting of the executive of the Great War Veterans' association held in the Memorial hall Thursday night conditions were discussed by executive members. Comrade Poole moved a motion, seconded by Comrade Walker, asking that a meeting of all organizations interested in the solving of the unemployment problem be called at once with the idea of taking a definite line of action.

President of the G.W.V.A., W. A. Irwin, expressed his conviction that no time should be lost in the organization of a general council of representative citizens to cope with the problem and Captain Bowen suggested that a meeting be called immediately.

Members of the Edmonton city council are to be interviewed as are also members of the provincial government. It is declared that something must be done immediately to give jobs to those veterans who are badly in need of them. Veterans do not [illegible] charity, President Irwin of the G.W.V.A. points out. "They want work and [illegible], and the right to live."

TWO HUSKIE TEAMS CARRY NORTHERN MAIL

Christmas Correspondence For Far North Will Probably Total 500 Pounds

Arrangements have been made by the Northern Trading Company for sending through two dog teams from McMurray carrying the Christmas mail for the north country. The N.T. has the contract for the delivery of the mail for the trader the trapper and the missionary right to the Arctic circle and its dog team drivers maintain the one avenue of communication with the "outside" during the long winter season. The Christmas mail will leave Edmonton on December 1st; a considerable quantity is already in the post office for the far north and those desiring to communicate with the north country are advised to register their mail for the reason that registered matter will have priority. Following this first class mail comes next in order with papers and other literature following.

Up to the present time the Christmas mail for the north has been carried in one dog sleigh but with the considerable addition to the northern population this year further accommodation is necessary and two teams of huskies will leave McMurray carrying in all about 500 pounds weight of mail matter.

One of the teams will consist of the dogs with which Wada the Japanese musher made the round trip to Fort Norman last winter taking them as green unbroken puppies, and returning with them in the best of condition—the only team to make the round trip between the two points. This team and the second string of dogs are owned by the Northern Trading Company and will be driven by Bill Matthews an old timer in the north and a well known "musher."

The two teams will part company at Fort Smith one returning south, while the other will "carry on" to the north each post providing fresh relays of dogs to get the mail through. The Fort Smith dogs will be changed at Resolution these latter going as far as Providence from where a fresh team will take charge to Simpson, and so down the river at Wrigley, Norman, Good Hope and finally McPherson arriving at the journey's end on January 27th.

Although known all through the north as the "Christmas mail," strictly speaking it is only so as far as Fort Providence where it arrives December 22nd, the festive season having passed by the time the huskies trot into Fort Simpson.

British Admiralty Suspends All Work on Four Battle Ships Being Built of Super Hood Type

London, Nov. 18—The admiralty announced today, that it had ordered the cessation of all work on the four battleships of super-Hood type. The shipbuilding firms were notified yesterday not to incur any further liabilities on new naval construction until further notice from the admiralty.

These contracts were awarded only two weeks ago.

Officials explained that the practical effect of the admiralty's order would be the absolute cessation of all work on warships pending the outcome of the Washington conference.

Three of the ships were to have been built on the Clyde and the fourth at Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Actual Construction Not Begun.

The admiralty order halts work on all the new warships authorized by parliament. Actual construction has not yet begun although it is understood virtually all the preliminary work has been completed.

The four ships were to cost about £32,000,000 in all and the bulk of this sum will be saved by the government, as a comparatively small sum is due the constructors for the work already accomplished.

The admiralty order caused consternation along the Clyde, where there is much unemployment which was expected to be alleviated by the work on the warships.

The plans of the British admiralty for capital ship construction appear to have been modified from time to time in the three years since the war, as the lessons of that conflict were worked out, and the status of the building program is not quite clear on the records.

Originally Four Ships.

There were originally four ships of the Hood type, only one of which, the Hood herself, was completed, begun in 1916, she was launched late in 1918 and completed in 1920. The other three ships all of a highly powerful battle cruiser type were designed to meet the lessons of the battle of Jutland work on them having been stopped in March, 1917.

It appeared from London despatches in August last, dealing with admiralty construction plans, that four new battle cruisers were to be turned out as improvements over the Hood type, to take the place of obsolete vessels. Their completion by 1925 was expected. These ships were to have been probably the most heavily armed in the world, carrying ten to twelve 16-inch guns each in their main batteries. The Hood has a main battery of eight 15-inch guns and her normal displacement is 41,200 tons.

Jury Not Complete In Arbuckle Case

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 18—After counsel for both sides had accepted definitely a jury to try Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle on a manslaughter charge yesterday, admissions by one of the twelve about to be sworn in set the attorneys back at picking out a twelfth juror late yesterday. As a result yesterday's session ended with the jury incomplete.

George R. Morgan was the man who blocked the proceedings. He informed the court he wished to change his answer to certain questions asked him and then announced he had formed an opinion "on the weight of circumstantial evidence," he was excused.

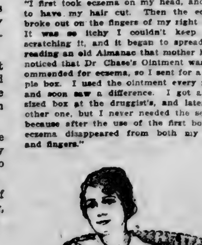
Eczema

Miss Bessie Stewart, Lanark, Ont., writes: "I first took eczema on my head, and had to have my hair cut. Then the eczema broke out on the fingers of my right hand. It was so itchy I couldn't keep from scratching it, and it began to spread. In reading an old Almanac that mother had, I noticed that Dr. Chase's Ointment was recommended for eczema, so I sent for a sample box. I used the ointment every night, and soon saw a difference. I got a full-sized box at the druggist's, and later another one, but I never needed the second, because after the use of the first box the eczema disappeared from both my head and fingers."



Baby's Skin

Mrs. Everett Roberts, 44 Endicott Ave., Halifax, N.S., writes: "I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for my baby, who had ringworms all over his face. I tried almost everything I knew of without success until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This completely freed him of this annoying skin trouble in a short time. I would not be without this ointment in the house, and trust this may induce others to give it a trial and be convinced of its merits."

The New Assistant at Pine Clearing School

By BRET HARTE

CHAPTER I.

THE schoolmistress of Pine Clearing was taking a last look around her schoolroom before leaving it for the day. Mature, thin, precise—not pretty enough to have excited Homeric feuds, nor yet so plain as to preclude certain soothing graces—she was the widow of a poor Congregational minister, and had been expressly imported from San Francisco to squarely mark the issue between the regenerate and unregenerate life. Low-voiced, gentlewomanly, with the pallor of ill-health perhaps unduly accented by her mourning, which was still cut modishly enough to show off her spare but good figure, she was supposed to represent the most of pious, scholastic refinement.

As she was stepping from the threshold she was suddenly confronted by a brisk, business-looking man who was about to enter. "Just in time to catch you, Mrs. Martin," he said hurriedly; then, quickly correcting his manifest familiarity, he added, "I mean I took the liberty of running in here on my way to the stage office. That matter you spoke of is all arranged. I talked it over with the other trustees, wrote to Sam Barstow, and he's agreeable, and has sent somebody up, and," he rapidly consulted his watch, "he ought to be here now; and I'm on my way to meet him with the other trustees."

Mrs. Martin, who at once recognized her visitor as the chairman of the school board, received the abrupt information with the slight tremulousness, faint increase of color, and hurried breathing of a nervous woman.

"But," she said, "it was only a suggestion of mine, Mr. Sperry; I really have no right to ask—I had no idea——"

"It's all right, ma'am—never you mind. We put the case square to Barstow. We allowed that the school was getting too large for you to tackle—I mean, you know, to superintend single-handed; and that these Pike county boys they are running in on us are a little too big and sassy for a lady like you to lasso and throw down—I mean, to sorter control—don't you see? But, bless you, Sam Barstow saw it all in a minit! He just jumped at it. Must go now—they'll be waiting. Only I thought I'd drop in a-passin' to keep you posted;" and, taking off his hat, he began to back from the porch.

Arrived at the stage office, he found the two other trustees awaiting him, and the still more tardy stagecoach. One, a large, smooth-faced, portly man, was the Presbyterian minister; the other, of thinner and more serious aspect, was a large mill-owner.

"I presume," said the Rev. Mr. Peaseley slowly, "that as our good brother Barstow, in the urgency of the occasion, has to some extent anticipated our functions in engaging this assistant, he is—a—a—satsified with his capacity?"

"Sam knows what he's about," said the mill-owner cheerfully, "and as he's regularly buckled down to the work here, and will go his bottom dollar on it, you can safely leave things to him."

"He certainly has exhibited great zeal," said the reverend gentleman patroniznly.

"Zeal!" echoed Sperry enthusiastically, "zeal? Why, he runs Pine Clearing as he runs his bank and his express company in Sacramento, and he's as well posted as if he were here all the time. Why, look here;" he nudged the mill-owner secretly, and, as the minister's back was momentarily turned, pulled out the letter he had avoided [illegible] Martin, and pointed [illegible]. "I'll be d—d," said the writer, "but I'll have peace and quietness at Pine Clearing, if I have to wipe out or make over the whole Pike county gang. Draw on me for a piano, if you think Mrs. Martin can work it. But don't say anything to Peaseley first, or he'll want it changed for a harmonium and that lets us in for psalm singing till you can't rest. Mind! I don't object to church influence—it's a good hold—but you must run it with other things equal, and not let it run you. I've got the schoolhouse insured for thirty thousand dollars—special rates, too."

The mill-owner smiled. "Sam's head is level! But," he added, "he don't say much about the new assistant he's sending."

"Only here, he says, 'I reckon the man I send will do all around; for Pike county has its claims as well as Boston.'"

"What does that mean?" asked the mill-owner.

"I reckon he means he don't want Pine Clearing to get too high-toned any more than he wants it too low down. He's mighty square in his averages—is Sam."

Here speculation was stopped by the rapid oncoming of the stagecoach in all the important fury of a belated arrival. "Had to go around by Montezuma to let off Jack Hill," curtly explained the driver, as he swung himself from the box, and entered the hotel bar-room in company with the new expressman, who had evidently taken's Hill's place on the box-seat. Automatically indifferent to further inquiry, he called out cheerfully, "Come along, boys, and hear this yere last new yarn about Sam Barstow—it's the biggest thing out." And in another moment the waiting crowd with glasses in their hands, were eagerly listening to the repetition of the "yarn" from the new expressman, to the apparent exclusion of other matters mundane and practical.

When the story-teller had concluded amidst a general call for more drinks, Sperry approached the driver. The latter recognizing him, turned to [illegible] companion carelessly, said, "Here's one of 'em," and he was going away when Sperry stopped him.

"We were expecting a young man."

"Yes," said the driver impatiently, "and there he is I reckon."

"We don't mean the new expressman" said the minister, smiling blandly, "but a young man who—"

"That ain't no new expressman," returned the driver in scornful deprecation of his interlocutor's ignorance. "He only took Hill's place from Montezuma. He's the new kid reviver and polisher for that university you're runnin' here. I say—you fellers oughter get him to tell you that story of Sam Barstow and the Chinaman. It'd limber you fellers up to hear it."

"Not a bit of it. He's got a letter from Sam for one o' ye. Yere, Charley—what's your name! Come yere. Here's all three bosses waiting for ye."

And the supposed expressman and [illegible] narrator of amusing stories came [illegible]ward and presented his credentials [illegible] the assistant teacher of Pine Clear[illegible]

CHAPTER II.

[illegible]en the practical Mr. Sperry was [illegible] aback. The young man before [illegible] was squarely built, with broad shoulders and a certain air of muscular activity. But his face, although good humored was remarkable for offering not the slightest indication of studious preoccupation or mental training. A large mouth, light blue eyes, a square jaw, the other features being indistinctive—were immobile as a mask—except that, unlike a mask, they seemed to actually reflect the vaculty of the mood within, instead of concealing it. But as he saluted the trustees they each had the same feeling that even this expression was imported and not instinctive.

Yet there was the letter in Mr. Peaseley's hands from Barstow, introducing Mr. Charles Twing as the first assistant teacher in the Pine Clearing Free Academy!

"Yes."

"That is—you are quite well acquainted with him?"

"If you'd heard me gag his style a minute ago so that everybody here knew who it was you'd say so."

Mr. Peaseley's eyes sought the ceiling. "I presume, Mr.—Mr. Twing, you feel that you are fully competent to undertake this work?"

"I reckon he does!"

"Who does?"

"Sam Barstow, or he wouldn't have selected me, I presume" with the slightest possible and almost instinctive imitation of the reverend gentleman's manner, "his head is considered level."

Mr. Peaseley withdrew his eyes from the ceiling. "I have," he said to his companions; with a pained smile, "an important choir meeting to attend this afternoon. I fear I must be excused." As he moved towards the door, the others formally following him, until out of the stranger's hearing, he added, "I wash my hands of this. But the real arbiter in this matter will be—thank Heaven!—the mistress herself. Her decision will be speedy and final. For even Mr. Barstow will not dare to force so outrageous a character upon a delicate, refined woman."

"And, of course,' 'added the mill-owner, "that will leave us out of any difficulty with Sam."

The two men returned to the hapless stranger. It would be necessary, they said, to introduce him to his principal Mrs. Martin, at once. They might still find her at the schoolhouse, distant but a few steps. Here they did find Mrs. Martin, who had naturally, lingered after the interview with Sperry.

She came forward to meet them, with the nervous shyness and slightly fastidious hesitation that was her nature. They saw, or fancied they saw, the same surprise and disappointment they had themselves experienced pass over her sensitive face, as she looked at him; they felt that their vulgar charge appeared still more outrageous by contrast with this delicate woman and her pretty, refined surroundings; but they saw that he enjoyed it, and was even—if such a word could be applied to self-conscious a man—more at ease in her presence!

"I reckon you and me will pull together very well, ma'am," he said confidently.

"It's a mighty pretty place you've got here—and I like it, and if we can't run it, I don't know who can. Only just let me know what you want, ma'am, and you can count on me every time."

"It's your say you know; you're the only one to be considered or consulted here."

"Only just say what you want me to do" continued Twing "apparently ignoring the trustees; "pick out the style of job; give me a hint or two how to work it or what you'd think would be the proper gag to fetch 'em, and I'm there, ma'am. It may be new at first, but I'll get at the business of it quick enough."

Mrs. Martin smiled—this time quite percepttibly—with the least little color in her cheeks and eyes. "Then you've had no experience in teaching?" she said.

"Well—no."

"Not much."

The two trustees looked at each other. Even Mr. Pheaseley had not conceived such a damning repelation.

"Well," said Mrs. Martin slowly, 'perhaps Mr. Twing had better come early tomorrow morning and begin."

"Begin?" gasped Mr. Sperry in breathless astonishment.

"Certainly," said Mrs. Martin in timid explanation. "If he is new to the work the sooner the better."

Mr. Sperry could only gaze blankly at his brother official. Had they heard aright? He drew her quickly aside. "One moment, Mrs. Martin! You said to me an hour ago that you didn't intend to have asked Mr. Barstow to send you an assistant. I hope that, merely because he has done so, you don't feel obliged to accept this man against your better judgment?"

"Oh, no," said Mrs. Martin quietly.

"Mrs. Martin," he said in a lower voice, "I ought to tell you that the Reverend Mr. Peasoley strongly doubts the competency of that young man."

"Yes—But"—

"Then his competency only concerns me—and I don't see what Mr. Peaseley has to say about it."

Chapter III

Mrs. Martin was early at the schoolhouse the next morning, yet not so early but that she discovered that the new assistant had been there before her. Thihs was shown in some re-arrangement of the school seats and benches. It was nearly the school hour when he appeared to her surprise, marshaling a file of some of the smaller children whom he had evidently picked up en route, and who were, to her greater surprise, apparently on the best of terms with him. "Thought I'd better take 'em in, introduce myself to 'em and get 'em to know me before school begins. Excuse me' he went on hastily, "but I've a lot more coming up, and I'd better make myself square with them outside." But Mrs. Martin had apparently developed a certain degree of stiffness since their evening's interview.

"It seems to me quite as important, Mr. Twing," she said dryly, "that you should first learn some of your own duties, which I came here early to teach you."

"Not at all," he said cheerfully. 'Today I take my seat, as I've arranged it, you see, over there with them, and watch 'em go through the motions. One rehearsal's enough for me." And before she could reply he was out of the schoolhouse again, hailing the newcomers. This was done with apparently such delight to the children, and with some evidently imported expression into his smooth masklike face, that Mrs. Martin had to content herself with watching him with equal curiosity. She was turning away with a sudden sense of forgotten dignity, when a shout of joyous childish laughter attracted her attention to the window. The new assistant, with half a dozen small children on his square shoulders, walking with bent back and every stimulation of advanced senility, was evidently personating, with the assistance of astonishingly distorted features, the ogre of a Christmas pantomine. And when school began, although he marshaled them triumphantly to the very door — with what contortion of face or stimulation of character she was unable to guess — after he had entered the schoolroom and taken his seat every vistage of his previous facial aberration was gone, and only his usual stolidity remained.

Yet she was nervously conscious, meanwhile, of a more ill-omened occurrence. This was the non-arrival of several of her oldest pupils, notably the refractory and incorrigible Pike County contingent to whom Sperry had alluded. For the past few days they had hovered on the verge of active insubordination. It was, therefore, with some inward trepidations, not entirely relieved by Twing's presence, that she saw the three Mackinnons and the two Hardees slouch into the school a full hour after the lessons had begun. They did not even excuse themselves and Mrs. Martin was obliged to demand an explanation. The culprit addressed—a dull, heavy-looking youth of nineteen—hesitated with an air of mingled doggedness and sheepishness, and then, without replying nudged his companion. It was evidently a preconcerted signal of rebellion for the boy nudged stopped, and began determinedly:

"Wot's our excuse for coming an hour late? Well, we ain't got none. We don't call it an hour late — we don't. We call it the right time. We call it the right time for our lessons, for we don't allow to come here to sing hymns wit hbabies. We don't want any more Daniels in the Lions' Den played off on us. We reckon to do our sums, and our figgerin', and our readin' and writin' and the American Constitution. That's our rights and what our fathers pay school taxes for, and we want 'em."

Mrs. Martin sat, quite white and self-contained, with her eyes fixed on the frayed rim of the rebel's straw hat which he still kept on his head. Then she said quietly:—

"He can't," came a voice cheerfully. It was the new assistant. The whole school faced rapidly towards him. The rebel leader and his followers, who had not noticed him before, stared at the interrupter, who did not, however, seem to exhibit any of the authority of office, but rather the comment and criticism of one of themselves. "Wot you mean?" asked the boy, indignantly.

I mean you can't take off your hat because you've got some things stowed away in it you don't want seen" said Twing, with an immovable face.

"Wot things??" exclaimed the boy angrily. Then suddenly recollecting himself, he added, "Go along! You can't fool me! Think you'll make me take off my hat—don't you?"

"Well,' said Twing, advancing to the side of the rebel, "look here then!" With a dexterous movement and a slight struggle from the boy, he lifted the hat. A half dozen apples, a bird's nest, two bird's eggs, and a fluttering half-fledged bird fell from it. A blank book of hopeless bewilderment settled upon the boy's face and the gravity of the situation disappeared forever in the irrepressible burst of laughter, in which even his brother rebels joined. The smallest child who had been half-frightened, half-fascinated by the bold, bad heroic attitude of the mutineer, was quick to see the ridiculousness of that figure crowned with cheap schoolboy plunder. Even Mrs. Martin felt that nothing she could say at that moment could lift the rebellion into seriousness again. But Twing was evidently not satisfied.

'Beg Mrs. Martin's pardon and say you were foolin' with the boys" he said in a low voice.

The boy numbled an apology to Mrs. Martin scrambled in a blank, hopeless way to his seat, and the brief rebellion ignominiously ended. But two things struck Mrs. Martin as peculiar. She overheard the culprit say, with bated breath and evident sincerity, to his comrades, "Hadn't nothing in my hat anyway!" All this, however, did not blind her to the serious intent of the rebellion or of Twing's unaccountable assumption of her prerogative. While he was still romping with the children at recess she called him in.

"I must remind you," she said, with a slight nervous asperity, "that this outrageous conduct of Tom Hardee was evidently deliberated and prepared by others, and cannot end in this way."

He looked at her with a face so exasperatingly expressionless that she could have slapped it as it had belonged to one of the older scholars, and said—"But it has ended. It's dead frost."

"I don't know what you mean; and I must remind you also that in this school we neither teach nor learn slang."

"Excuse me—won't you? But, look here, Mrs. Martin, I found out early this morning, when I was squaring myself with the other children, that there was this row hangin' on—in fact, that there was a sort of idea that Pike County wasn't having a fair show—excuse me—in the running of the school, and that Peaseley and Barstow were a little too much on in every scene. In fact, you see, it was just what Tom said."

"This is insufferable," said Mrs. Martin, her eyes growing darker as her cheeks grew red. "They shall go home to their parents, and tell them from me"—

"That they're all mistaken—excuse me—but thats' just what they're goin' to do. I tell you, Mrs. Martin, their little game's busted—I beg pardon—but it's all over. You'll have no more trouble with them."

"And you think that just because you found Tom had something in his hat, and exposed him?" said Mrs. Martin scornfully.

"Nothing?" repeated Mrs. Martin.

"No."

"But I saw you take the things out."

"That was only a trick! He had nothing except what I had up my sleeve, and forced on him. He knew it, and that frightened him, and made him look like a fool, and so bursted up his conspiracy. There's nothin' boys are more afraid of than ridicule, or the man or boy that makes 'em ridiculous."

"I wont ask you if you call this fair to the boy, Mr. Twing?" said Mrs. Martin hotly; "but is this your idea of discipline?"

"I call it fair, because Tom knew it was some kind of a trick, and wasn't deceived. I call it discipline if it made him do what was right afterwards, and makes him afraid or unwilling to do anythng to offend me or you again. And," he added, with awkward earnestness, "if you'll just leave all this to me, and only consider me here to take this sort of work—which ain't a lady's—off your hands, we'll just strike our own line between Peaseley's and Pike county—and run this school in spite of both."

A little, mollified, a good deal puzzled and perhaps more influenced by the man's manner than she had imagined, Mrs. Martin said nothing, but let the day pass without dismissing the offenders.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Martin was somewhat formally early at the schoolhouse the next morning. "Perhaps," she said, with an odd mixture of dignity and timidity, "we'd better, before school commences, go over the lessons for the day."

"I have," he said quickly. "I told you one rehearsal was enough for me."

"You mean you have looked over them?"

"Got 'em by heart. Letter perfect. Want to hear me? Listen!"

She did. He had actually committed to memory, and without a lapse, the entire text of rules, questions, answers and examples of the lessons for the day.

CHAPTER IV.

Before a month had passed Mr. Twing's success was secure and established. Grammar was still taught in Pine Clearing School in spite of the Hardees and Mackinnons, but Twing had managed to import into the cognate exercises of recitation a wonderful degree of enthusiasm and excellence. Dialectical Pike County, that had refused to recognize the governing powers of the nominative case, nevertheless came out strong on classical elocution, and Tom Hardee, who had delivered his ungrammatical protest on behalf of Pike County, was no less strong, if more elegant in his impeachment of Warren Hastings as Edmund Burke. As to Mrs. Martin, she seemed to accept the work of Mr. Twing after his own definition of it—as of a masculine quality ill suited to a lady's tastes and inclinations; but it was noticeable that while she had at first repelled any criticism of him whatever, she had lately been given to explaining his position to her friends, and had spoken of him with somewhat labored and ostentatious patronage. Yet when they were alone together she frankly found him very amusing, and his presumption and vulgarity so clearly unintentional that they no longer offended her. They were good friends without having any confidences beyond the duties of the school. What his actual antecedents were she had never cared to know, nor he apparently to reveal; that he had been engaged in some other occupations of superior or inferior quality would not have been remarkable in a community where the principal lawyer had been a soldier and the miller a doctor. The fact that he admired her was plain enough to her; that it pleased her, but carried with it no ulterior thought or responsibility might have been equally clear to others. Perhaps it was so to him.

Howbeit, this easy mutual intercourse was one day interrupted by what seemed a trifling incident. The piano, which Mr. Barstow had promised, duly made its appearance in the schoolhouse, to the delight of the scholars and the gentle satisfaction of Mrs. Martin, who, in addition to the rudimentary musical instruction of the younger girls, occasionally played upon it herself in a prim, refined and conscientious fashion. To this, when she was alone after school hours, she sometimes added a faint, colorless voice of limited range and gentlewomanly expression. It was on one of these occasions that Twing, becoming an incidental auditor of this chaste, sad piping, was not only permitted to remain to hear the end of a love-song of strictly guarded passion in the subjunctive mood, but at the close was invited to try his hand—a quick, if not cultivated one—at the instrument. He did so. Like her, he added his voice. Like hers, it was a love-song. But there the similitude ended. Negro in dialect, illiterate in construction, idiotic in passion, and presumably addressed to the "Rose of Alabama," in the very extravagance of its childish infatuation it might have been a mockery of the schoolmistress' song but for one tremendous fact! In unrestrained feeling, pathetic yearning, and exquisite tenderness of expression, it was unmistakably and appallingly personal and sincere. It was true the lips spoken of were "lubly," the eyes alluded to were like "lightenin' bugs," but from the voice and gestures of the singer Mrs. Martin confusedly felt that they were intended for her. Alternately flushing and paling, with a hysteric smile hovering round her small reserved mouth, the unfortunate gentlewoman was fain to turn to the window to keep her countenance until the song was concluded.

Nevertheless, when Twing, a week or two later, suggested that he might sing the same song as a solo at a certain performance to be given by the school children in aid of a local charity, she dryly intimated that it was hardly of a character to suit the entertainment. "But", she added, more gently, "you recite so well; why not give a recitation?"

He looked at her with questioning and troubled eyes.

"Do you wish it?" he said suddenly.

Somewhat confused, but more irritated by his abruptness, she replied, "Why not?" But when the day came and before a crowded audience, in which there was a fair sprinkling of strangers, she regretted her rash suggestion. For when the pupils had gone through certain calisthenic exercises—admirably taught and arranged by him—and "spoken their pieces," he rose, and fixing his eyes on her, began Othello's defense before the Duke and Council. Here, as on the previous occasion, she felt herself personally alluded to in his account of his wooing. Yet she was also conscious, and, as she thought, as inconsistently, of being pleased and even proud of his success. At the conclusion the applause was general, and a voice added with husky admiration and familiarity:—

"Bravo, Johnny Walker!"

Twing's face became suddenly white as a Pierrot mask. There was a dead silence, in which the voice continued "Give us 'Sugar in the Gourd.' Johnny."

A few hisses, and cries of "Hush!" "Put him out!" followed. Mrs. Martin raised her eyes quickly to where her assistant had stood bowing his thanks a moment before. He was gone!

More concerned that she cared to confess, she turned back to the school room, after the little performers and their audience had departed, in the hope that he might return. It was getting late, the nearly level rays of the sun were lying on the empty benches at the lower end of the room, but the desk where she sat with its lid raised was in deep shadow. Suddenly she heard his voice in the rear hall, but it was accompanied by another—the same voice which had interrupted the applause. Before she could either withdraw or make herself known the two men had entered the room, and were passing slowly through it. She understood at once that Twing had slipped out into a janitor's room in the rear, where he had evidently forced an interview and explanation from his interrupter.

"But", said the stranger, as if following an aggrieved line of apology, "if Barstow knew who you were, and what you'd done and still thought you good enough to rastle round here and square up them Pike County fellers and them kids—what in thunder do you care if the others do find you out, as long as Barstow sticks to you?"

"I've told you why, Dick," returned Twing gloomily.

"Yes, she's a saint, an angel. More than that—she's a lady, Dick to the tip of her fingers who knows nothing of the world outside a parson's study. She took me on trust—without a word —when the trustees hung back and stared. She's never asked me about myself, and now when she knows who and what I have been—she'll loathe me!"

"But look here, Jim" said the stranger anxiously. "I'll say it's all a lie. I'll come here and apologize to you before her, and say I took you for somebody else. I'll—"

"It's too late" said Twing moodily.

"Leave here.'

They had reached the door together. To Mrs. Martins terror, as the stranger passed out, Twing instead of following him as she expected, said "Good-night," and gloomily re-entered the schoolroom. Here he paused a moment and then throwing himself on one of the benches dropped his head upon a desk with his face buried in his hands—like a very schoolboy.

What passed through Mrs. Martin's mind I know not. For a moment she sat erect and rigid at her desk. Then she slipped quietly down, and, softly as one of the last shadows cast by the dying sun, glided across the floor to where he sat.

"Mrs. Martin," he said, starting to his feet.

"I have heard all," she said faintly. "I couldn't help it. I was here when you came in. But I want to tell you that I am conteng to know you only as you seem to be—as I have always found you here—strong and loyal to a duty laid upon you by those who had a full knowledge of all you had been."

"Did you? Do you know what I have been?"

Mrs. Martin looked frightened, trembled a moment and, recovering herself with an effort, said gently, "I know nothing of your past."

"Noth'ng?" he repeated with a mirthless attempt at laughter, and a quick breath. "Not that I've been a—a—mountebank, a variety actor—a clown, you know, for the amusement of the lowest, at twentyfive cents a ticket. That I'm 'Johnny Walker,' the song and dance man—the allround man—selected by Mr. Barstow to teach these boors a lesson as to what they wanted!"

She looked at him a moment—timidly, yet thoughtfully. "Then you are an actor—a person who stimulates what he does not feel?"

"Yes."

"And all the time you have been here you have been acting the schoolmaster—playing a part—for—for Mr. Barstow?"

"Yes."

"Always?"

"Yes."

The color came softly to her face again and her voice was very low. "And when you sang to me that day, and when you looked at me—as you did—an hour or two ago—while you were entertaining—you were—only—acting?"

Mr. Twing's answer was not known but it must have been a full and complete one, for it was quite dark when he left the schoolroom—not for the last time—with its mistress on his arm.

THE END.

Blonds Are the Adventurers; Brunettes Are Real Creators

The historical fact that the white people of Europe and their American colonies are descended in the main from three distinct races is now generally known, even to the man in the street.

These races or sub-species, are the blond, long-headed Nordics, who originated probably around the Baltic sea among the receding icefields of the last glacial epoch and who have imposed their speech and customs on large sections of the globe; the moderately brunet, broad-headed Alpines, who are presumed to have come out of the highlands of Central and Western Asia and who now occupy the central regions of Europe in a broad belt extending from the Caucasus mountains to the Pyrenees and the coast of Brittany; and the smaller, quite dark brunets, long of skull and refined of frame, who are generally found on the seacoasts from Ireland all the way to Japan and Eastern Siberia. These varieties of mankind mix, when they are brought together, in accordance with familiar processes and results of hybridization; but as a rule, in the course of centuries, one type will tend to breed the others out. It is probably true that the Mediterraneans, being smaller, more delicately organized folk, have always been peculiarly liable to be driven to the wall by the tougher, more militant stocks. That does not mean that the art-loving Mediterraneans are or ever have been an inferior stock or that they have not still their very valuable contributions to make to civilization.

Waht the small brunets could do when they had a fair chance is shown strikingly in the arts and crafts that have survived from Egypt.

Some have found that more of British art and music and romance comes out of the west of England and Wales, where the people are prevailingly dark, than from the eastern counties in which most of them are descendants of fair-haired pirates from Germany and Scandinavia.

Some have drawn a similar contrast between the poetic brunet Irish of the west and the pugnacious, red-headed and matter-of-fact Irishmen of the eastern and southern coasts, who are really Danes.

The highly imaginative quality of the art of the troubadours of Provencal has by others been thought due to the circumstances that the inhabitants of the south of France are generally of the Mediterranean race, while those of the central provinces are Alpines.

A graduate of Trinity college, Cambridge, England, Mr. Hawes, as anthropologist, has measured the long brunet skulls and studied the characteristics of living possessors of the same kind of crania between Great Britain and the Far Eastern island of Saghalien, the latter once owned by Russia and now held by Japan. In the extensive studies in the first years of this centry of the Ainus, a white tribe surviving in a region that has been overrun by yellow men, and although unforeseen difficulties prevented his reaching the main tribe of the Ainus, he carried on studies among several allied tribes.

Who the Ainus really are and how they came to be there, neither Mr. Hawess investigations nor any made more lately have definitely established. To the anthropologist they look to be a branch of the widely scattered Mediterranean race. If so, they are distant cousins of any brownish men of your acquaintance; of any average Spaniard or south Italian.

A certain Japanese born in California now has a case before the supreme court of the United States for recognition as a white man, his claim based on the fact that the Japanese are by no means all of the yellow and brown races. If he is of Ainu blood he is right in his contention, according to many anthropologists.

Crete, Old Home of Brunettes

Crete was chosen by Mr. Hawes for carrying on some studies of the dark-eyed folk just at a time when Mrs. Hawes, then Miss Boyd of Boston, a graduate of Smith college and fellow of the American School of Classical Studies at Athens, was finishing a three-year excavation of the Cretan city of Gournes, whose ruins she had discovered.

The island, lying well to the south of Greece, across the entrance to the Aegean sea and having a rather easy approach from Asia and Africa, gives great chance to the scientist and the artist, who wish to observe what the brunet Mediterraneans could do when conditions were most favorable.

Among islands of the Mediterranean today Sardinia has the purest survival of the old stock—the most unmixed with the blood of the Alpine broad-heads who have almost everywhere pressed down upon this race from the north. Sardinia, however, has never had any such civilization as Crete had 3,000 and more years ago. For that reason it is less interesting to the student of art.

The shape of the brain-box is, as is well known, one of the most important characters by means of which breeds of people are distinguished from one another. It is a very persistent character, one handed down from generation to generation with no modification caused by the kind of hat you wear or the evidences of swelled head you may exhibit. In modern Egypt you will find among the peasantry precisely the long skulls. Yet Egypt has been overrun with all sorts of invaders, most of them of non-Mediterranean race. One form of government has succeeded another. The civilization of today under the British protectorate is quite unlike that of the time of Rameses.

The evidence of the skulls, however, proves that the fellaheen, the basic substratum of the population, are still of essentially pure Mediterranean stock, and that they have been but little affected from the south by the hordes of broad-headed Alphines that have overrun most lands bordering on the eastern Mediterranean.

Crete, quite like Egypt, has had Alpine invasions and possibly even a few of the fair-haired Nordics who just before the dawn of history may have imposed one of the so-called Aryan languages on the darker people of Greece. The inhabitants of the principal towns of the island and the villages immediately around them are seen at once by the anthropologists to be moderately broadheaded, approaching the same type as the continental Greek whom you may observe in almost any shoe-shine parlors.

Skulls, on the other hand, from cities that were thriving in the greatest days of Cretan civilization and that later were buried, are almost always long.

Even before he began his wanderings in the island Mr. Hawes, the noted anthropologist, had a theory that in the remoter and more elevated districts he ought to find communities where the Mediterranean brunets have survived in comparative purity. This is the history of the impact of tribes upon tribes; that a swarm of invaders occupies the fertile plains and pushes the original inhabitants back into the hills. In that fashion the blond Nordics who entered Great Britain as Celts, as Anglo-Saxons, as Danes, drove the dark Mediterranean folk into the mountains of Wales and the Scottish Highlanders where you will still find whole villages of people with black eyes or dark brown hair.

In monasteries of the Cretan hill towns, where life has gone on without break or disturbance for 1,500 years, Mr. Hawes was permitted to measure skulls of the departed. These were usually of the long-head type.

Although the isolation of these survivors of the original brunet stock has kept them out of the artistic developments of modern times, they still interestingly practice ancient arts and crafts. The women are remarkable in the needle crafts, and the feeling for color is acute.

Brunet vs. Blonde Temperament

The Mediterranean brunet differs practically from the blond in being more sociable and even-tempered, less adventurous and less subject to vague discontents.

The brunets like to live in villages even if this means that the tillers of the fields must go a long way to reach their holdings. They gather in the plaza and applaud the dancer or the prestidigitator with great gusto. They love all the little excitements of community living whereas the Nordics are much readier to live in widely scattered families, each man's house being his castle. These gregarious qualities of the brunet Mr. Hawes found to be quite marked among the Cretans and, for that matter, among the distant Ainus of Japan.

The blond race has had some part in creating the fine art of the ages, and the Alpine brunets perhaps a larger share than they are sometimes credited with. Yet it remains true as Mr. Hawes tells you, that our greatest indebtedness for the arts that make up the house beautiful and the beautiful temple is to the small, delicately formed brunets, such as those who create the civilization of Egypt and Crete.

But Once That Way

From Wayside Tales:

The body of the house sensed that such was his calling. She greeted him rather icily.

"Madame," he said politely, "I am selling a volume, a single volume which I think will interest you. May I not—"

"No books," she said firmly. "Positively none. I am not interested in any books."

"Ah,, not any books possibly, but this particular book of mine is the only one of its kind in the world. It is only $4 and worth many times as much to the owner. May I not—"

"No!" snapped the lady. "I wouldn't buy it at any price. I am tired of opening my door and finding an agent standing there waiting to sell me somethig."

"I though as much, my dear madam, and that is why I hoped to sell you—"

"I am not interested—"

"I shall never come this way again. I knock but once—then pass on forever. The title of this volume is "How to Get Rid of an Agent Without Buying." Yes, indeed, madam, $4 is correct. I thank you! Good morning!"

Probably no other line of business has profited more from the high-powered motor car than that of the undertaker.

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Has no equal for prompt results. Takes but a moment to prepare, and saves you about $2.

You know that pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several peculiar elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest. Pine is famous for this purpose.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex in a 16-oz. bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make 16 ounces—more than you can buy ready-made for $2.50. It is pure, good and very pleasant—children take it eagerly.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and Syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Liberal Leader Declares in Favor of Railway Man for National Railway Board

Winnipeg, Nov. 18. — (Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.)—A few outbreaks of questioning during which Mr. King's war record was asked about, and during which also the name of Mr. Meighen was mentioned in the same connection, featured this morning's Liberal meeting here.

There was a good attendance at the meeting despite the unusual hour of 9.30. Mr. King, who was the only speaker, was given a good hearing.

"What's your platform?" asked a man's voice.

"To get away from that sort of thing (usurpation) and have a government representative of the people of this country," Mr. King retorted. "The great struggle in this and other lands has been to secure free and representative government."

Mr. King mentioned the war and several voices at once began asking questions. Some one cried out: "Where were you during the war?" and in answer another voice said: "And where was Arthur Meighen?"

The Liberal leader appealed for a chance to answer. He had given this country an answer in parliament and was prepared to stand by that, he said. He did not need to mention that neither Mr. Meighen nor Mr. CrerarCrerar had been in uniform but all three had probably been able to serve their king and country better as they did. Mr. King declared he was proud to have been able to serve his king and country as he had done.

"Some of them were making 550 per cent. I mean Tom Crerar's company," called out a man from the gallery. The Liberal leader declared that some of the interests now supporting the present government had been making immense profits in the war.

Mr. King declared that instead of giving women the vote the Meighen government had denied the vote to all except those from whom it expected support. He again laid charges of autocracy against the premier.

Dealing with Grand Trunk matters, Mr. King said he had attempted to secure for the Grand Trunk strikers of 1910 their re-instatement. Even in parliament last year he had demanded this but the Meighen government had refused to include such a clause in the acquisition bill.

"Would you put a railway man on the railway board if you get in there?" asked one man.

"We will," declared Mr. King, "for two years we have tried to have a railway man placed on the Canadian National board," Mr. King said.

To solve the railway problem there must be a thorough investigation, Mr. King declared. The people were suffering because the National railways were in the hands of a small autocratic group, Mr. King declared.

Asked as to his platform on natural resources, Mr. King said the Laurier policy had been favorable to western Canada. It had made tariff changes, broken the railway monopoly and created new provinces. "The work of giving the provinces management of their own affairs will not be completed until the provinces control their own resources," Mr. King stated. His party had that policy and would not seek to avoid it.

Mr. King hoped to have a strong body of members behind him. He deplored the third party idea and said he had continually striven for unity among the forces, with Liberal and Progressive ideals and principles. He now found the Progressives seeking control of government for a political group. They were alienating their friends and faced the danger of isolation for themselves and perhaps the whole west.

The Liberal leader laid down his tariff policy and said he believed this would make for better conditions among both producers and consumers in Canada.

The farmer movement had grown up because the farmers were not getting proper legislative treatment. The Liberal party, said Mr. King, had taken its political life in its hands to fight for reciprocity which it believed to be in the farmers' interests as it gave wider markets.

Mr. King challenged anyone to produce different tariff speeches made by himself. "Sure you have," said one man.

"Produce any two which differ on essential particulars and I'll give you a thousand dollars," Mr. King challenged.

"I stood in parliament for that resolution regarding publicity on campaign funds. All honesty is not confined to one group. We also moved to have every election advertisement show its source."

The Maecenas of the Pacific Slope

By BRET HARTE

(Copyright by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., sole authorised publishers in America of Bret Harte's works. Published by arrangement with the Literary Digest Newspaper Syndicate.) :: :: :: :: ::

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING INSTALLMENTS

Robert Rushbrook, known as the Maecenas of the Pacific Slope, extended hospitality to all who would accept it with the same barbaric opulence which characterized the equipment of his "palatial villa." He discovered Grace Nevil, a young woman of unusual refinement, who was his guest although he did not know her, re-arranging the furniture of her room to evident advantage. Rushbrook helped her to make the desired changes, without divulging his identity. At the banquet which followed, Grace met Jack Somers, one of Rushbrook's proteges, who, it was generally understood, practically ran Rushbrook's enormous mansion for him.

The following December Grace called on Rushbrook at his city home. The servant showed her to a room which, to her amazement, contained the furniture of the room she had occupied in Rushbrook's summer mansion, placed precisely as she had arranged it there. Grace told Rushbrook that it was against her express wishes that her friends were making inquiries of Rushbrook concerning the expectations of Somers, to whom Grace had become engaged, and she thanked Rushbrook for the generosity with which he had promised to treat Somers.

"COWARD!" said Grace, "stand aside and let me pass!" She swept by him to the door. But it opened upon Rushbrook's re-entrance. He stood for an instant glancing at the pair, and then on the fragments of the paper that strewed the floor. Then, still holding the door in his hand, he said quietly:

"One moment before you go, Miss Nevil. If this is the result of any misunderstanding as to the presence of another woman here, in company with Mr. Somers, it is only fair to him to say that that woman is here as a friend of mine, not of his, and I alone am responsible."

Grace halted, and turned the cold steel of her proud eyes on the two men. As they rested on Rushbrook they quivered slightly. "I can already bear witness," she said coldly, "to the generosity of Mr. Rushbrook in a matter which then touched me. But there certainly is no necessity for him to show it now in a matter in which I have not the slightest concern."

As she swept out of the room and was received in the respectable shadow of the waiting James, Rushbrook turned to Somers.

"And I'm afraid it won't do—for Leyton saw you," he said curtly. "Now, then, shut that door, for you and I, Jack Somers, have a word to say to each other."

What that word was, and how it was received, is not a part of this record. But it is told that it was the beginning of that mighty Iliad, still remembered of men, which shook the financial camps of San Francisco and divided them into bitter contending parties. For when it became known the next day that Somers had suddenly abandonel Rushbrook, and carried over to a powerful foreign capitalist the secret methods and even, it was believed, the luck of his late employer, it was certain that there would be war to the knife, and that it was no longer a struggle of rival enterprise, but of vindictive men.

CHAPTER VII.

For a year the battle between the Somers faction and the giant but solitary Rushbrook raged fiercely, with varying success. I grieve to say that the proteges and parasites of Maecenas deserted him in a body; nay, they openly alleged that it was the true artistic nature and refinement of Somers that had always attracted them, and that a man like Rushbrook, who bought pictures by the yard—equally of the unknown struggling artist and the famous masters,—was no true patroit of Art. Rushbrook made no attempt to recover his lost prestige and once, when squeezed into a tight "corner," and forced to realise on his treasures, he put them up at auction and the people called them "daubs;" their rage knew no bounds. It was then that an unfettered press discovered that Rushbrook never was a Maecenas at all, grimly deprecated his assumption of that title, and even doubted if he were truly a millionaire. It was at this time that a few stood by him—notably, the mill inventor from Siskyou, grown plethoric with success, but eventually ground between the upper and nether millstone of the Somers and Rushbrook party. Miss Nevill had returned to the Atlantic states with Mrs. Leyton. While rumors had played freely with the relations of Somers and the Signora as the possible cause of the rupture between him and Rushbrook, no mention has ever been made of the name of Miss Nevil.

It was raining heavily one afternoon, when Mr. Rushbrook drove from his office to his San Francisco house. The fierce struggle in which he was engaged left him little time for hospitality, and for the last two weeks his house had been comparatively deserted. He passed through the empty rooms, changed in little except the absence of some valuable monstrosities which had gone to replenish his capital. When he reached his bedroom, he paused a moment at the open door.

"James!"

"Yes, sir," said James, appearing out of the shadow.

"What are you waiting for?"

"You were waiting there this morning; you were in the ante-room of my study while I was writing. You were outside the blue room while I sat at breakfast. You were at my elbow in the drawing-room last night. Now, James," continued Mr. Rushbrook, with his usual grave directness, "I don't intend to commit suicide; I can't afford it, so keep your time and your rest for yourself—you want it—that's a good fellow."

"Yes, sir."

"James!"

"Yes, sir."

Rushbrook extended his hand. There was that faint, rare smile on his handsome mouth, for which James would at any time have laid down his life. But he only silently grasped his master's hand, and the two men remained looking into each other's eyes without a word. Then Mr. Rushbrook entered his room, lay down, and went to sleep, and James vanished in the shadow.

At the end of an hour Mr. Rushbrook awoke refreshed, and even James, who came to call him, appeared to have brightened in the interval. "I have ordered a fire, sir, in the reserved room, the one fitted up from Lososos as your study has had no chance of being cleaned these two weeks. It will be a change for you, sir. I hope you'll excuse my not waking you to consult you about it."

Rushbrook remained so silent that James, fancying he had not heard him, was about to repeat himself when his master said quickly, "Very well, come for me there when dinner is ready," and entered the passage leading to the room. James did not follow him, and when Mr. Rushbrook, opening the door, started back with an exclamation, no one but the inmate heard the word that rose to his lips.

For there, seated before the glow of the blazing fire, was Miss Grace Nevil. Sheh ad evidently just arrived, for her mantle was barely loosened around her neck, and upon the fringe of brown hair between her bonnet and her broad low forehead a few drops of rain still sparkled. As she lifted her long lashes quickly towards the door, it seemed as if they, too, had caught a little of that moisture. Rushbrook moved impatiently forward, and then stopped. Grace rose unhesitatingly to her feet, and met him half-way with frankly outstretched hands. "First of all," she said, with a half nervouses laugh, "don't scold James; it's all my fault; I forbade him to announce me, lest you should drive me away, for I heard that during this excitement you came here for rest, and saw no one. Even the intrusion into this room is all my own. I confess now that I saw it the last night I was here; I was anxious to know if it was unchanged, and made James bring me here. I did not understand it then. I do now—and—thank you."

Her face must have shown that she was conscious that he was still holding her hand, for he suddenly released it. With a heightened color and a half girlish naivete, that was the more charming for its contrast with her tall figure and air of thorobred repose, she turned back to her chair, and lightly motioned him to take the one before her. "I am here on business; otherwise I should not have dared to look in upon you at all."

She stopped, drew off her gloves with a provoking deliberation, which was none the less fascinating that it implied a demure consciousness of inducing some impatience in the breast of her companions, stretched them out carefully by the fingers, laid them down neatly on the table, placed her elbows on her knees, and bending forward, lifted her honest handsome eyes to the man before her.

"Mr. Rushbrook, I have got between four and five hundred thousand dollars that I have no use for; I can control securities which can be converted, if necessary, into a hundred thousand more in ten days. I am free and my mistress. It is generally considered that I know what I am about—you admitted as much when I was your pupil. I have come here to place this sum in your hands, at your free disposal. You know why and for what pupose."

"But what do you know of my affairs?" asked Rushbrook, quickly.

'Everything, and I know you, which is better. Call it an investment if you like—for I know you will succeed—and let me share your profits. Call it—if you please—restitution, for I am the miserable cause of your rupture with that man. Or call it revenge if you like," she said with a faint smile, "and let me fight at your side against our common enemy! Please, Mr. Rushbrook, don't deny me this. I have comes three thousand miles for it; I could have sent it to you—or written—but I feared you would not understand it. You are smiling—you will take it?"

"I cannot," said Rushbrook, gravely.

"Then you force me to go into the stock market myself, and fight for you, and, unaided by your genius, perhaps lose it without benefiting you."

Rushbrook did not reply.

"At least, then, tell me why you cannot'."

'Because I love you, Miss Nevil."

A sudden instinct to rise and move away, a greater one to remain and hear him speak again, and a still greater one to keep back the blood that she felt was returning all too quickly to her cheek after the first shock, kept her silent. But she dropped her eyes.

"I loved you ever since I first saw you at Lososos," he went on quickly. "I said to myself even then, that if there was a woman that would fill my life and make me what she wished me to be, it was you. I even fancied that day that you understood me better than any woman, or even any man, that I had ever met before.' I loved you through all that miserable business with that man, even when my failure to make you happy with another brought me no nearer to you. I have loved you always. I shall love you always. I love you more for this foolish kindness that brings you beneath my roof once more, and gives me a chance to speak my heart to you, if only once and for the last time, than all the fortune that you could put at my disposal. But I could not accept what you would offer me from any woman who was not my wife—and I could not marry any woman that did not love me. I am perhaps past the age when I could inspire a young girl's affection; but I have not reached the age when I would accept anything less.' He stopped abruptly. Grace did not look up. There was a tear glistening on her long eyelashes, albeit a faint smile played upon her lips.

Do you call this business, Mr. Rushbrook?' she said softly.

"Business?"

"Grace—my darling—tell me—is it possible?"

It was too late for her to rise now, as his hands held both hers, and his handsome mouth was smiling level with her own. So it really seemed to a dispassionate spectator that it was possible, and before she had left the room, it even appeared to be the most probable thing it the world.

The union of Grace Nevil and Robert Rushbrook was recorded by local history as the crown to his victory over the King. But only he and his wife knew that it was the cause.

Great Britain Will Support Claim For Open Door in China, Reserving No Phase Jap Treaty at Conference

Attitude Adopted by British Delegation Wholly Unselfish, Desire Being to Further General Well-Being of World —Big Nine Will Convene Monday to Hear Premier Briand Outline Position of France on Land Disarmament

Washington, Nov. 18—The armament conference was called by Chairman Hughes today to meet at 11 a.m. next Monday for its third plenary session.

An official announcement of call contained no mention of the purpose of the meeting but it was generally understood that the session would be devoted almost entirely to a presentation of the French viewpoint on land armaments by Premier Briand.

The prospect today was that neither of the committees dealing with naval armament or the Far Eastern problems would be able to report.

Attitude Unselfish

Washington Nov. 18—(Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)—A definite declaration of British policy in connection with China which came from an official in close touch with the empire's representatives this morning, indicated that in this, as in the case of the armament proposals, Great Britain has adopted an entirely unselfish and disinterested attitude.

The British delegates came to this conference for the purpose of joining the other nations in doing everything that can be done to rehabilitate China and to raise it to its proper place among the nations, having regard to its size and its commercial possibilities, this spokesman declared. The whole tenor of his statement indicates clearly that Britian has no axe to grind in her efforts to clear up the intricate questions involved in the Chineses situation and is even willing to sacrifice her own interests in that direction in order that a satisfactory solution may be reached.

Open Door Policy Best

"Any special rights Britain possesses will be dealt with for the general well-being" it was declared. "The British as a race of traders know well that the open door is the best method of creating commercial prosperity for the whole world. The object of Great Britain is international co-operation and her wish is to see China developed for the benefit of the Chinese and the other nations of the world."

Incidentally, regarding the sacrifice of extra territorial rights which the French delegates yesterday announced they were willing to make, it was shown that Great Britain eighteen years ago had offered China the same terms as were contained in the French offer of today—to relinquish these rights as soon as the Chinese administration of justice was placed upon a basis similar to the judicial systems of the western world thus guaranteeing a fair hearing to the nationals of other countries.

URGE REDUCTION IN FREIGHT RATES FROM THE NORTH

On his return to Winnipeg after inspecting the damage at British Columbia points as a result of recent floods, D. C. Coleman, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific railway and president of the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia railway, was a visitor in Edmonton Friday.

A delegation of Board of Trade officials, headed by the president of the association, Percy Abbott, waited on Mr. Coleman, urging a reduction of freight tariffs over the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia lines, particularly respecting the rates on out-going grain shipments. Mr. Coleman promised due consideration to the plea of local business men

It was pointed out to the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia railway president that at the present price of grain and the high cost of transportation, it was almost impossible for farmers to ship grain from the north with any degree of hope of getting even a return of the amount of money represented in the cost of the grain production.

How serious the situation in the north is at the present time on this account was clearly pointed out by local business men, and Mr. Coleman was entirely sympathetic to their plea for freight rate reductions.

Mr. Coleman, during Friday morning was in conference with General Manager J. A. McGregor of the Ed. D. & B.C. in regard to railway operations in the north. Mr. McGregor informed the president of the progress being made on the new twenty-five mile extension to the Waterhole and of the possibilities of an early completion of the construction of the line.

At the coast Mr. Coleman found that great damage to tracks and bridges had been caused as a result of the floods. Fortunately, however repair men had been able to place the line in shape with little loss of time and interruption.

Police Court

In the city police court Friday morning John McIsaac who was found guilty on the charge of being in illegal possession of liquor was fined $200 and the costs of the case. J. G. Pelletier was committed to stand his trial on the charge of having carnal knowledge of a little girl.
